REMAINS OF CAPT. THRASHER.—The remains of Capt. Byron P. Thrasher, late of the 108th Regiment, are expected to arrive at the Genesee Valley depot at 5:30 this P.M. The Light Guard (Zouaves), of which deceased was formerly a member, will receive the remains at the depot and give military escort.

108TH REGIMENT.

The following is but a partial list of casualties:

Lieut. Dayton L. Card, commanding Co. E, was killed instantly by a shell. His body presented a ghastly sight. He was struck in the middle of the breast by a missile which exploded and tore him literally in two. Half of his face was also torn away by a fragment of shell.

Charles P. Leclear, Co. E, killed; J. Wickham, Co. E, wounded; Sergeant A. B. Hadley, Co. E, wounded; Sergeant M. C. Bryant, Co. E, wounded; J. D. Ansink, Co. E, wounded; Lieut. Cyrus E. Wickes, Co. E, killed; J. Brownell, Co. E, wounded; Corp. W. Milgate, Co. E, wounded; Wm. Leach, Co. E, wounded; D. Lappens, Co. E, wounded.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTH REGIMENT.

Lieutenant Colonel Pierce, slight; Lieut. McDonald, slight—he has been reported killed; Lieut. Dutton, slight; — Skinner, Co. F; — McVetey, Co. F, thigh; Lieut. Amiet, killed; Capt. Fellman, both legs shot away, dangerous; Lieut. Graham, head, dangerous; Sergeant Welch, killed; Fitzner, Co. F, killed; Meeker, Co. F, severe; Schout, Co. F, slight.

List of Casualties in the Late Battle.

We subjoin a list of the killed, wounded and missing in the late fighting near Gettysburg.—Our losses have been severe, and most of the troops from this vicinity have been engaged.—This is only a partial list, and further accounts will be looked for with intense interest:

108TH REGIMENT.

Lieut. Dayton T. Card, commanding Co. E, was killed instantly by a shell. His body presented a ghastly sight. He was struck in the middle of the breast by a missile which exploded and tore him literally in two. Half of his face was also torn away by a fragment of shell.

[The death of Lieut. Card falls with crushing weight upon a young wife, the mother of four small children, and upon his afflicted parents. He followed the occupation of printer, and left his case to take up arms for his country with an earnest and honest patriotism. He enlisted in the 108th, and immediately found promotion through his ability and soldierly qualities.]

Lieut. Evans, killed.

Lieut. McDonald, killed.

Chas. P. Leclear, Co. E, killed.

J. Wickham, Co. E, wounded.

Sergt. A. B. Hadley, Co. E, wounded.

Sergt. M. C. Bryan, Co. E, wounded.

J. D. Ansink, Co. E, wounded.

Lieut. Cyrus O. Wickes, Co. E, killed.

[Lieut. Wickes is well known in this city.—He enlisted at the outbreak of the rebellion in the 13th, N. Y. V., under Capt. Lewis. He afterwards joined the 108th. His parents reside in Albion, and the death of their son will be a sad blow.]

J. Brounell, Co. E, wounded.

Corp. W. Milgate, Co. E, wounded.

Wm. Leach, Co. E, wounded.

D. Lappens, Co. E, wounded.

The Casualties in the 108th Regiment.

The following report of the killed, wounded and missing of the 108th Regiment was prepared by Lieut. Parsons, and is probably corfield towards the hospital. Just then General Hays rode up, and ordered me to tell Col. Pierce to take command of the brigade. I started for my horse, and just as I reached him a whole shell passed through him, rendering him, on the whole, a useless horse. I went across the field towards the Colonel, but no more expected to reach him than to fly. My mission, however, was accomplished in safety. At this time the shells were tearing our men fearfully, knocking them all to pieces.

The 108th were distributed between the guns of Woodruff's Battery, as a support, and consequently suffered fearfully. Lieut. Card was killed here, being struck by a piece of shell in the breast, tearing it open and carrying away a portion of his face. I saw him almost at the moment he was struck. Lieut. Amiet was also killed soon after, and Corp. Fairchild, Co. D, was killed nearly at the same time and place.—Lieut. Graham was severely wounded. The battery was served most splendidly, throwing shell and solid shot at the rebel batteries with unerring aim. Their ammunition soon gave out, leaving them nothing but canister. Out of 60 horses only 20 were left—not enough to move the guns. At the request of Lieut. Woodruff, up jumped the 108th, moved the guns back, and then dropped again upon the ground to await the approach of the rebel infantry. Having temporarily silenced our battery, the enemy advanced a whole brigade on our devoted regiment. When within 300 yards of us, the boys moved the battery forward again, and Lieut. Woodruff poured the canister into the ranks of the advancing rebels. The 108th also advanced and gave them their balls. As the regiment advanced, I took Capt. Postle's horse and rode back, being then the only staff officer on the ground. An Orderly with the Brigade flag accompanied me. The balls flew thicker and faster around us, and nothing short of an Omnipotent arm saved us. Up came the rebels, and as they neared our men, seeing that if they persisted in advancing they would be annihilated, threw down their arms. At this moment the clear voice of Col. Pierce rang out the order, "Cease firing," and the rebels ran in and gave themselves up as prisoners. As they ran by our line, I took six swords from the officers, and also a battle flag, which I delivered to the Provost Guard, with the prisoners, 200 in number. The swords were sent to our headquarters to preserve as trophies. Along the line of the whole Brigade the scene was the same, the rebels throwing down their arms as soon as they found themselves in such hot proximity to us. The attacking party was at least four times as large as ours, in fact we have captured as many prisoners as we had men in the command, and the field is strewn with their dead and wounded. Our brave boys fell by hundreds, but the number of the enemy slain far exceeds ours.

Our division captured sixteen stand of colors or battle flags, in the engagement. Our own, second brigade, got ten of them. Our men fought with the utmost coolness and tenacity, determined that no rebel should get beyond our lines, unless unarmed. Lieut. Woodruff was killed just as his battery was delivering their last charge to the enemy. Noble fellow! he was as cool and brave as a man could be, and it seemed sad that he could not have lived to share the honors of a victory he had so gallantly aided to win. At 7 o'clock the firing had nearly subsided, and the dead and wounded must be cared for. Our ambulances have begun their trips to the field, and the brave fallen are being rapidly removed. Many of our poor boys lie among the dead battymen and horses, and I will get a list of their names by morning. Other regiments in the brigade suffered as severely as ours in proportion to their numbers. We have taken many a fraternal grasp of the hand in exchanging congratulations on our escape from personal injury. I cannot write more to night.

In a few lines addressed to his father, dated the morning of the 4th, Lieut. P. says: "We have had a terrible battle, as you will see by my diary enclosed. Thanks to a merciful God, I am safe, though I had no expectation of seeing the sun set last night. We are very busy getting returns of killed and wounded, which I will enclose. The 108th fought nobly and suffered terribly, losing 140 men in killed, wounded and missing. The missing consist of those taken prisoners and others who will yet be heard from somewhere. Col. Powers was sick and not in the engagement, as also was Acting Adjutant C. B. Ayers. The rest are all right."

LOCAL MATTERS.

From the 108th Reg't---Complete list of Casualties.

We are enabled to-day to lay before our readers the official list of casualties in the 108th Regiment at the battle of Gettysburg. The list was sent by Lieut. Parsons to his father, Geo. W. Parsons. Lieut. Parsons was Aid-de-camp to Col. Smyth, commanding 2d brigade, 3d division, 2d army corps.

In a diary kept by the Lieutenant he says the boys fought nobly and suffered terribly, losing in killed, wounded and missing, 146 men.

Many of our brave boys have been killed, others are suffering from painful wounds. The great majority of wounded are only slightly so. The publication of the list will carry anguish to many a household.

COMMISSIONED OFFICERS KILLED.

2d Lieut. Robert Evans, 2d Lieut. Dayton T. Card, 1st Lieut. C. W. Amlet.

NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS KILLED.

 B. Tischer, William Lyons, J. Plunkett, C. Howard, C. Sewell, H. Barnum, Alex. Blake, Wm. Gilmore, James Foley, G. Kedward, — Williams, — Van Male, John Burns, Geo. Broken, J. Cunningham, J. H. Ackerman, John Kerr, Robert Rider, Charles Rief, G. Eberle, P. Griener, H. Dietrich, Chris. Stien, G. Behler, Fred. Mayer, William Maurer, Theo. Bolivar, Phil. Huter, C. Nais.

RECAPITULATION.

Commissioned Officers killed, 3; non-commissioned officers killed, 5; privates killed, 6. Commissioned officers wounded, 9; non-commissioned officers wounded, 26; privates wounded, 43; missing, 48.

Lieutenant Parsons states that some of the missing are known to be prisoners—the rest will turn up somewhere. Colonel Smyth was wounded, and Lieut. Schaffer on the Colonel's staff was also wounded. Lieut. Parsons had both of his horses killed. Col. Powers and Acting Adj. C. B. Ayers were sick and not in the fight.

Further List of Casualties.

We find the following additional list of killed and wounded in yesterday's New York papers:

108TH REGIMENT.—Lieut. Col. Pierce, slight; Lt. Evans, killed; Lt. McDonald, slight; Lt. Dutton, slightly; Lieut. Hicks, slightly; — Skinner, F; — McVety, F, thigh; Lt. Amiest, killed; Capt. Fellman, both legs shot away, and dangerous; Lt. Graham, head, dangerous; Sergt. Welsh,* killed; Fitzner, F, killed; Meeker, F, severe; Swager, F, wound; Schont, F, slight.

*Sergt. Morris Welsh was a nephew of Frank J. Ayers, of this city. The news of his death has caused his mother to be frantic with grief.

126TH REGIMENT (WAYNE AND CAYUGA).—Col. E. Sherrill, killed; Capt. Shimes, Co. F, killed; Capt. O. J. Herrinden, H, killed; Capt. Wheeler, K, killed; Lt. Lawrence, B, wounded; Capt. J. H. Brough, E, wounded; Lt. Brown, C, wounded; Capt. Richardson, D, wounded; Lt. Holmes, G, killed; Lt. Owen, H, wounded; Lt. Hontoon, H, wounded; Lt. Seimans, K, wounded. Three hundred men killed, wounded and missing.

The correspondent who sends the list, adds:

The above is the noble record of the brave regiment known by their traducers as "Harper's Ferry Cowards." Capt. Brough is severely wounded, but still talks of nothing but fighting and capturing Rebels.

140TH REGIMENT.—B. McCormick, arm.

REYNOLDS' BATTERY.—Capt. Gilbert H. Reynolds, struck by a fragment of shell upon the left eye and side. The sight of the eye is permanently lost, and the lids much hurt and inflamed. This injury was received on Wednesday, when the first corps, under Gen. Reynolds, who was killed at the beginning of the action, took Gettysburg, and was attacked by the rebel army then lying west of the town. Reynolds' Battery and two others were posted on the left line of battle, and here the rebels charged furiously, and succeeded in flanking our line. The first corps was driven back, and the batteries left without infantry supports, were compelled to retire. The horses attached to one of the guns were shot, and the gun lost. Another was disabled by the breaking of an axle, but taken off the field. Lt. Wilbur's and Sergt. Rooney's horses were shot under them. Eighteen or twenty horses were lost in all—eight being killed at one time.

During the fighting, the Louisiana Tigers charged on the batteries, rushing up to the muzzles of the guns, and actually spiking one of Capt. Cooper's pieces. The Tigers suffered fearfully and were driven back. One gunner used his rammer, and another seized a musket and bayoneted a daring rebel.

The wounded men belonging to the battery, with their captain, were taken prisoners, and sent to the town, of which the rebels then had possession. On the recapture of the place, they were released and sent to the rear, as the rebels threatened to shell the village.

The casualties in the Battery as far as known by Capt. Reynolds, are as follows: Edward Costello, killed; John Valier, Oswego, shot in the heel; John P. Conn, severe head wound; Amos Gibbs, wrist wounded; Conable, (detached from a Pennsylvania regiment) in the side; Edward Foster, Rochester, slightly; Sergt. Patrick Rooney, Rochester, and Patrick Gray, of Oswego, missing. There are no additional names in the published lists.

—Capt. Reynolds says the Battery fought splendidly, the officers were cool and the men brave and efficient. Good service was done during the whole three days' battles.

From the 108th Regiment—Official List of Casualties.

On Saturday we gave an authentic but unofficial list of casualties in the 108th Regiment at the battle of Gettysburg. To-day we are enabled, through the kindness of Lieut. and Acting Adjutant C. B. Ayers, to give an official list of casualties, classified in companies, with the nature and extent of each man's wound.—Where the wounded are located at present we are not informed.

CHARLES B. AYERS,

Lieut. and Acting Adj. 108th N. Y. V.

THE LATE CAPT. THRASHER.—The body of the late Capt. Thrasher arrived last night by the Erie Railroad, was received by a detachment of the Light Guard and conveyed to the Undertaking Rooms of Mr. Jeffrey, State street, to be repacked and put in suitable condition for the funeral obsequies which will take place at three this p. m., from the Second Baptist Church, North street. The Union Guard, Capt. Sellinger, will form the escort. Other military companies will attend the funeral. 108th

THE LATE LIEUT. ROBERT EVANS.—This young officer, who was killed in the battle of Gettysburg, as previously stated, was deserving of more than a passing notice. Lieut. E. was in some respects a remarkable character. He will be remembered by many as the young man who on Sunday afternoons, particularly, during the summer months, made public addresses in front of the Court House, from the steps of Centre Market, and other places. He was a very zealous reformer. Slavery, intemperance and irreligion were the ordinary topics of his public discourses, and we think it may be truly said of him that his every day practices were in strict conformity with his professions.

Lieut. Evans was very active in recruiting for the 108th Regiment, in which he enlisted as Orderly Sergeant, but was soon after promoted to a Lieutenancy. If he was in stature the smallest officer in the regiment, he was also reckoned one of the bravest. In his moral and political nature he was like the Puritan soldier of the sixteenth century, and possessed all the shining qualities of the true Cromwellian—high patriotic ardor, burning religious zeal, austere morality and indomitable personal courage.—He would have smitten "the enemies of the Lord and of Gideon" even as he desired to smite the rebels, hip and thigh, and to exterminate them, root and branch.

Lieut. E. was a young man of more than ordinary ability. He had for some time prior to entering the army, while in the employ of G. W. Burbank, Esq., as head miller, devoted all his leisure hours to the study of theology. In the conduct of the religious public meetings, and in the temperance cause, he bore his own expenses, such was his enthusiasm in religion and reform. After entering the army, he made a will, appointing Dea. David Dickey his executor. In this will he provided, in the event of death on the battle field, that his body should be brought to this city for interment; and the balance of his funds, more or less, should be equally divided between the Union and Foreign Bible Societies. He was a member of the First Baptist Church of this city, and enjoyed the confidence and respect of all who knew him.

From the 108th Regiment--The Great Battle--Partial List of Sufferers.

Lieutenant Gardner Griswold of the 108th Regiment, who was wounded in the battle of Gettysburg, arrived here last night and gives us the following facts in reference to his regiment: The regiment was engaged during the 2d and 3d days of the battle and suffered severely, and the Lieutenant thinks it lost half--going into the fight 200 strong. It supported Ricketts' old regular battery during the entire fight, and the command owed its safety from capture to this regiment, as he himself said on the field. They suffered most from the artillery of the enemy, which was concentrated at that point. The first day they lost only fifteen, but on the second they were called upon to repulse the enemy, who, supposing the battery deserted, charged upon it but were driven off. The boys turned artillerists on this occasion, and as all the horses were shot, they run up the pieces by hand and dealt out the cannister to the gunners.

The rebels captured said they supposed they were fighting Couch's militia, and their first exclamation was, "God, we are fighting the Army of the Potomac!" The Lieutenant says that he was told by the boys after the fight that opposite them the rebels had left 72 cannon spiked, which they had seen. The regiment lay there during these two days, he says, without any sleep or anything to eat.

As the Lieutenant left the regiment after he was wounded, he cannot give any list of the casualties. He, however, learned the following:

Col. Pierce was struck on the arm with a piece of shell.

Col. Parsons, on Brig. Gen. Hays's staff, had his horse shot.

Capt. Fellman, of this city, was wounded.

Lieuts. Amiette, Card, Evans, Graham and McDonald were also wounded.

Lieut. Griswold was struck in the foot by a piece of shell, making an uncomfortable wound.

Lieut. Graham was struck on the head, giving a scalp wound.

LOOK

ONE OF THE SLAIN.--It is a singular fact that in most cases the first reports that have been received here of casualties in our regiments have come through the New York papers. This may be accounted for by the fact that the telegraph wires are overburdened, so to speak, with business, and it is difficult to get in private messages. The shock of these reports as they come to the ears of friends is often very severe. The papers last night brought among the killed of the 108th the name of Sergt. Welch. His wife, a niece of Mrs. F. J. Ayres, was in the city and first heard of the death of her husband through the paper. She was greatly shocked and is nearly bereft of reason. Mr. Welch belonged in Riga and was home only a month since, at which time he gave directions in regard to his affairs to meet such a contingency as has occurred. His young wife and child have the sympathy of all in their bereavement.

DISHONORABLY DISMISSED.--Among the list of officers recently dishonorably dismissed from the service, as published elsewhere, will be found the name of Capt. H. P. Merrill, formerly a Lieut. of the 108th Regiment, and latterly of the 11th Heavy Artillery.

THE WOUNDED AT GETTYSBURG—DEATH
A SOLDIER OF THE 108TH.—F. R. Garlock, former member of the 108th Regiment, has just returned from a visit to the hospitals at Gettysburg, whither he went to ascertain the condition of Henry Rhodes of the 108th, son of Charles Rhodes, Esq., of Greece. He found that young Rhodes, who was reported missing, died of his wounds on the 3d of August at the 11th Army Corps Hospital in Gettysburg. Mr. Garlock gives us the following list of patients in the Latteman General Hospital, situated about one and a half miles from Gettysburg:

Michael Burns, Co. C, 140th Regiment, died August 3d. Buried in the burying grounds attached to the General Hospital.

A. S. Bostwick, 140th, wounded in the knee. Doing well.

Henry Smith, "Razor Strop Man," right leg amputated. Has "one more left." Doing well.

Andrew McComber, 140th, wounded. Doing well.

George Stripp, 140th, wounded. Doing well.

J. C. Geiger, same regiment, wounded. Doing well.

Samuel J. Bullock, Co. H, 108th Regiment, wounded. Doing well.

Bernard Matters, Co. A, 108th, wounded. Doing well.

Corp. Valentine Degan, Co. E, 140th, wounded. Doing well.

There are over 2,000 wounded men in Hospitals at Gettysburg. Among them are 800 rebels. Nearly all are doing well.

A DECEASED VOLUNTEER.—The body of Sergt. Morris Welsh, of the 108th regiment, killed at Gettysburg, arrived here last night by the Genesee Valley Railroad, and was taken immediately to Churchville for interment. Sergt. Welsh was a brave soldier and his fall will be lamented by all who knew him.

NOT DEAD YET.—The Union a day or two since contained a notice of the death of Seeley Meeker, a member of the 108th Regiment, who was said to have died of wounds received at the battle of Gettysburg. We learn that the friends of Mr. Meeker, at Churchville, where he resided, have received intelligence that he was only wounded, and that he is in a fair way to speedily recover.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

From the 108th.

FALMOUTH, VA., Dec. 29, '62.

I have nothing new to communicate. The weather is fine, or has been for three or four days. I have to add to our list of died, Chas. Stadley, Co. A., Merwin Hall, from 3d Ward, Co. G.

Capt. Yale's and Lieut. Geo. F. Loder's resignation have been accepted. Our sick have been removed to the Hospitals at Washington.

23

Another one of the regiment, whose name does not occur to me now, has also died. Several resignations of officers are pending. Heavy cannonading has been heard during the day.— Have nothing more to add to-night. I hope to date the next letter from another place, from present reports.

The Late Capt. Byron P. Thrasher— Resolutions by Officers of the 108th Reg't. N. Y. Vols.

HEADQUARTERS 108TH N. Y. VOLS.,
Camp near Falmouth, Va., June 6, '63.

At a meeting of the officers of the 108th Regiment, N. Y. Vols., held on the evening of June 4th, 1863, to express their sorrow for the loss of a brother officer, Capt. Byron P. Thrasher, who died of a wound received at the battle of Chancellorsville, May 3d, 1863, and their sympathies with the relatives and widow of deceased, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God to take from among us in early manhood, an efficient, brave and faithful soldier, Capt. Byron P. Thrasher, who died from the effects of a wound received while bravely battling for his country against armed traitors, the common enemies of Republican Government, and the cause of humanity, therefore Resolved, That Capt. B. P. Thrasher, by his meritorious and gentlemanly conduct, rose to an honorable position, and won the respect and esteem of his fellow officers, and that in his death we recognize the chastisement of Divine Power, and bow, deeply deploring our loss.

Resolved, That we tender the widow and relatives of deceased our heartfelt sympathies in their dire affliction, and commend them to Heaven for strength and consolation, in this hour of their deepest saddest bereavement.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the widow of deceased, and also to each of the Rochester daily papers for publication.

Capt. WM. H. ANDREWS, Pres't.

Lieut. CYRUS O. WICKS, Sec'y.

OUR ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

From the 108th Regiment.

FALMOUTH, Va., June 11, 1863.

We are still in our new camp, which has been metamorphosed from a dense wood of underbrush into a cool and shady grove—neatness and cleanliness being two essential rules to be observed in camp as a preventive against disease. I will report as evidence in support of such observance that, for five weeks after the return of the regiment from Chancellorsville, none were reported sick in the regimental hospital. It will thus be seen that the sanitary condition of our camp ranks high. During the excessive heat of late, several cases arising from that cause, have occurred, but I am not informed that they are of a serious nature.

The telegraph has informed you that this army has been actively on the alert for some days past. So it has, and is. What the programming is, we don't know. The result of movements reach you as soon as we get through with a job. What the morrow may bring forth is out of speculative range. The rebels are up and moving, and so are we. "Look out for stirring events soon." When? Now and then. Cannonading is a daily occurrence in this section, and although it carries death with it yet we have become accustomed to it, knowing that
