Guide to the Kenneth Powers Military History Collection

Scope of Collection:

Kenneth Powers, Historian of the 69th Regiment, created this collection of material about the 69th Regiment and several military units, including the 165th, 105th, 7th, 9th, 14th, Squadron A and other regiments, the National Guard, 27th and 42nd Divisions as well as other units. The bulk of the material is concerned with the Civil War, World War I and World War II, although there is material about the origins of some of the units prior to the Civil War and material about these units in the Spanish-American War and Mexican Border Service as well. Most of the units in the collection were related to the 69th Regiment in some way, chiefly by serving in larger military units. Powers retired as a Lt. Col. Inf., New York Guard. He was also very interested in Irish and Irish-American history as well as Powers family history and collected material related to these topics. He also was interested in the history of military uniforms, as well as medals and insignia and there is a substantial amount of material related to this interest. The collection includes original manuscripts and documents, photographs, maps, military uniform prints, scrapbooks, newspapers, broadsides, many photocopied newspaper and magazine articles and other formats of material. It is possibly the largest collection of material related to the history of the historic 69th Regiment in existence. The New York State Military Museum Research Center has numerous regimental histories related to the 69th Regiment and the other regiments, brigades and divisions with historical materials in this collection. Some histories of the 69th Regiment include:

Bilby, Joseph G., Remember Fontenoy!: The 69th New York and the Irish Brigade in the Civil War, 1995

Demeter, Richard, The Fighting 69th: A History, 2002

Harris, Stephen L., Duffy's War, Fr. Francis Duffy, Wild Bill Donovan and the Irish Fighting 69th in World War I, 2008

Kenneth Powers wrote brief historical summaries of the 69th Regiment and copies of those histories are found in the collection.

Series: Military Magazines

This is a series of magazines concerned with military topics and issues, but not published or concerned with particular military units. The latter are found with the respective military unit series.

New York National Guardsman, 1923–1940. This is official publication of the National Guard of the State of New York. It was published monthly. It included a variety of articles about the Guard, particular units in the Guard, editorials and other material. During the Twenties there was a series of historical sketches of different units by Col. Dewitt Clinton Falls. It is a major source of information for the history of the National Guard in New York. There are many photographs of individuals and events re: to the Guard. The issues run from 1923 to 1940. There are many missing issues, including no issues for 1924, 1929 and 1931 and with few issues for a few other years. There are a few duplicate issues. Photocopies of some pages were found filed with most issues and those copies have been left with the issues.

Army & Navy Illustrated, Philadelphia, Army and Navy Illustrated Publishing Co., May 1897, vol. 1, no. 5. Entire issue concerned with the dedication of Grant's Tomb monument in New York, including two photographs of the 7th Regt. on parade.

National Guard and Naval Militia Illustrated, New York, North Press Co., May 1897, much of issue is about the 7th Regt. and its camp at Peekskill with several photographs, including one photograph of the Gatling Gun Squad at Peekskill, 2 copies.

Series: Company of Military Historians, et al: Military Uniforms in America

This is a series of colored prints of the uniforms of various military units serving in the United States published by the Company of Military Historians. The Company of Military Historians is an organization founded in 1949 dedicated to the study of the uniforms, equipment, history and traditions of members of the U.S. Armed Forces and other nations serving in the Western Hemisphere. The Military Uniforms series has been published for many years by subscription to members of the Company and now has over 850 prints. The prints are done by well-known artists based upon extensive research by Company members and are accurate depictions of uniforms and equipment used by various military units. Most plates are accompanied by a 1-2 page description of the uniforms and equipment depicted as well as historical data about the unit during the time the uniform would have been used. All historical/descriptive notes have authors listed and all plates have names of the artists. There are many prints in the series collected here, including a few duplicate plates.

This series also includes a series of plates from the National Guard Heritage series and a set of plates called The American Soldier published by the U.S. Army, Center of Military History. There are also several plates of military uniforms, chiefly British units, published by others. The plates are filed in numerical order by plate number. A complete list of the plates can be found at Company of Military Historians web site by subject or by plate number. Plates related to the 69th Regiment and other regiments of particular interest to the Powers Collection include the following:

Plate 123, 69th Regt., NG, SNY, 1869-1884
Plate 210, Squadron A, NG, SNY, 1896-1903

Series: Newspapers:

This is a series of newspapers, both general with much military news (World War I) or newspapers published to present military news exclusively. The newspapers are generally in poor condition due to their brittle paper. It is recommended that a microfilm be made or acquired for these papers to avoid the use of the original papers where possible. The following lists these volumes:

Box 12:

Army Navy Journal, October 2, 1886, May 4, 1889, May 18, 1889 issues only. The May 4, 1889 issue is concerned with great parade of 40,000 troops in New York City on April 30, 1889 to celebrate the centennial of the inauguration of George Washington as President of the U.S.; including rosters of troops in the parade, several illustrations and other material. The 1886 issue has a variety of news, including unit news items, obituaries, news about National Guard, state troops and other material. May 18, 1889 issue includes same type of material as 1886 issue and brief articles about several New York units, including the 69th, 22nd, 12th, 9th, 13th and 71st regiments.

Yank, The Army Weekly, Dec. 31, 1943, 3 copies of magazine, includes article with photographs of 69th Regt. at battle of Makin Atoll; also regular features of Sad Sack cartoons, Post Exchange, Sports and other material. Series: 8th Regiment

This unit, known as the Washington Greys, (named from the fact that the unit escorted Gen. Washington during his inauguration as President), was originally formed as an artillery company in 1784; in 1809, it was designated 4th Regt., NYS Artillery, the designation was changed in 1812 to the 3rd Regt. NYS Artillery and in 1847 to the 8th Regt. NYS Militia; in 1908, after other changes, it was designated the 8th Coast Defense Command, N.G.S.N.Y. in 1914 and in 1917, it was named the 8th Coast Artillery Corps, NYG. During World War II, it was designated the 258th Field Artillery and the 2nd Battalion was later named the 991st Field Artillery Battalion. The regiment saw service in the War of 1812, several battles of the Civil War, was called out several times for riot and disaster service, guarded New York harbor and fought in France during World War I and the regiment fought chiefly in the European theater during World War II with some men serving in Africa and the South Pacific.

Series: 9th Regiment, N.Y.S.N.G.

Historical Note: The 9th Regiment had several changes of name over its nearly two centuries of life and the following is an abstract of that history of name changes. Founded in 1799 as the 6th Regiment, the name was changed to 2nd NYS Artillery in 1805 and to 9th Regiment, NYS Artillery in 1812. There was a reorganization of the regiment in 1850 and the name remained 9th Regiment. The regiment had many Irish nationalists and in 1858 many of these men transferred to the 69th New York Regiment and the 9th Regiment was once more reorganized in 1859. It entered the Civil War in the U.S. service as the 9th Regiment, but the name was changed to the 83rd New York Volunteers and it was mustered out by that name in 1864. After the war, it became the 9th Regiment, National Guard, State of New York, which name lasted until 1898 when it was designated 9th Regiment Infantry, New York Volunteers. In 1899, it was renamed 9th Regiment, National Guard, New York. In 1908, it became the 9th Coast Artillery and in 1914, the 9th Coast Defense Command. In 1917, as it was called into U.S. service for World War I, it became the 9th Coast Artillery Corps, New York Guard and in 1920, the name was changed to 9th Coast Defense Command, N.Y.N.G. and in the 1924 it became the 244th Coast Artillery and it served under that designation during World War II. The unit was also known as the New York City Guard from 1859-1861.

New York City Guard

There is also material that includes documents of the 9th Regt. and 11th Regt., both of which were part of the City Guard. The City Guard was formed in 1833 in New York City as the Pulawski Cadets (named for the Casimir Pulaski) and its' name was changed to New York City Guard in 1840. In 1847 it became part of the 11th Regt. and in 1857, it transferred to the 55th Regt. and finally in 1859, it became part of the 9th Regt. as C Company. The name eventually became another name for the entire 9th Regt.

Series: 13th Regiment (245th Artillery)

The 13th Regiment has a history from the earliest colonial era of Brooklyn, NY, having begun as a company of "Minute Men" in 1654. It became the Right Flank Company of the 64th Regiment in 1775 and remained with that name through the War of 1812; it later was called the Brooklyn City Guard. In 1847, the City Guard along with 8 other companies formed the 13th Regiment of Infantry. It served in the Civil War and until 1900 with that designation, when it was changed to 13th Heavy Artillery and in 1914, it became the 13th Coast Defense Command. The unit was broken up during WW I and officers and men served with several other artillery units. In 1924, it was redesignated as the 245th Coast Artillery and in 1963 the regiment was removed from the active rolls of the U.S. military.

Box 41:

Series: 71st Regiment, N.G.S.N.Y.

History:

The 71st Regt. was formed as a militia regiment in October 1850 and was known as the American Rifles, later changed to American Guard. Formed as a product of the anti-immigrant mood during the late 1840s, the regiment at first consisted of four rifle companies and in 1852 with the addition of 3 other companies taken from the 1st Regt. Cavalry, the 71st Regiment was formed. During the Civil War, the regiment served at the battle of First Bull Run, in the defenses of Washington, DC and later members of the regiment joined with the 124th NYS Inf. to fight in several other battles of the war. The 71st later served in the Spanish American War, the Mexican Border conflict of 1916 and in 1917, the regiment became the 54th Pioneer Inf. and served with the 1st and 3rd Armies at Meuse-Argonne and with the Army of Occupation of the Rhine. During World War II, the regiment served as part of the 44th Inf. Div. in both the European and Pacific theaters of operation. The 1st Battalion also served in the Aleutian campaign. After the war, the 71st was reactivated and Federalized as part of the 42d Inf. Div., NYNG. Later changes resulted in the 71st regimental companies designated as the 1st Battle Group, 71st Inf., NY Army National Guard. It should be noted that the History of the 7st Regiment, N.G.N.Y., 1919, states that a fire in the regiment's armory in 1902 destroyed the documents and scrapbooks that had been stored at the armory.

History:

“Work Copy, History of Sq. A in W.W. II,” ca. 459 pages. This is really a detailed, alphabetical (some overlap of alphabet in folders), listing of the members of Squadron A by name with description of each person's service record, including interesting anecdotes about their particular experiences (e.g. Robert Coale, Hugh A. Drum, John T. Gwynne, Robert W. Gilmore, John D. Graham, Norman L. Hope, Edward A. Hurd, William Harding Jackson, Francis Van Wyck Mason, Frederick I. Ordway, Jr., Giles T. Phillips, Eugene J. Pitou, Henry W. Putnam, Alfred G. Tuckerman,) and transcriptions of citations for medals awarded. The “History” is typed and heavily edited. From evidence in the correspondence in these papers, it appears that there was some controversy about publishing this material and that a copy of the data was to be made and kept at the headquarters of the Ex-Members Association of Squadron A. These documents (carbon copies) are on thin paper and badly wrinkled; some flattening was done during processing.

Photographs

The Powers Collection has many photographs of a wide variety of sizes and both color and monochrome. The photographs are an integral part of the Powers Collection. It should be noted that there are many photographs found in the textual collections as well because they were collected with the textual material. These latter photos were kept with the textual collection in order to not lose the context of the surrounding papers and records. The photographs listed below were found separate from any textual material, however, an effort has been to organize these photographs by their military unit and should be used along with the other textual material about the specific units.

The photographs are arranged, as the textual collections, generally by military unit (e.g. 69th Regiment) or if no unit can be identified, they are filed in a general group and described individually.

The photographs date chiefly from the First World War to the present, although there are also photos from the Spanish American War and Mexican Border conflicts.
