

CASUALTY LIST

69TH NEW YORK VOLUNTEER INFANTRY

FREDERICKSBURG VIRGINIA DECEMBER 13, 1862

Casualty List 69th New York

Fredericksburg, Va. December 13, 1862

The Official Report of Captain James Saunders is dated "Camp near Falmouth, December 22, 1862." This report is very brief. "In compliance with general orders received December 21, I hereby certify that the Sixty-ninth Regiment New York Volunteers entered the battle of Fredericksburg, on December 13, 1862, commanded by Col. Robert Nugent, and 18 commissioned officers and 210 rank and file, in which the above number regiment lost 16 commissioned officers and 160 rank and file, leaving Captain James Saunders, Lieutenant Milliken, and Lieutenant L. Brennan to bring the remnant of the regiment off the battle-field."

James Saunders

Captain, Comd. Sixty-ninth Regiment New York Volunteers.

William F. Fox, in "Regimental Losses in the Civil War:"

10 killed, 95 wounded, and 23 missing, for a total of 128.
238 engaged, the percentage of casualties was 53.7.
Killed and died of wounds 34, and the percentage of killed was 14.2.

Frederick Phisterer, in "New York in the War of the Rebellion:"

1 officer killed, and 23 enlisted men. 1 officer died of wounds, and 10 enlisted men. 9 enlisted men missing, for a total of 128.

D. P. Conyngham, in "The Irish Brigade and its Campaigns:"

2 officers killed, 14 wounded, 112 enlisted men killed, wounded and missing...128

The original list has a recapitulation of casualties: 16 Comd. Officers wounded

9 enlisted men killed, 80 wounded, and 23 missing, for a total of 9 killed, 96 wounded, and 23 missing.

Winfield S. Hancock was the division commander. This is from his Official Report: "Colonel Robert Nugent, severely wounded, commanding the 69th New York Volunteers, conducted his troops with his usual spirit, and was making a final effort to advance when he was shot. His regiment had nineteen (19) commissioned officers and two hundred and nineteen (219) enlisted men when the attack was made; its loss was sixteen (16) officers wounded, and one hundred and twelve (112) enlisted men killed, wounded, and missing. This gallant regiment was marched off the field by its fourth commander that day – the three senior commanders having been wounded."

This list was prepared from a photocopy of an original casualty list I found in the National Archives, Washington, D. C., with entries from the "Annual Report of the Adjutant General of the State of New York, 1901," which is the 69th New York unit roster, and other sources. The names are placed in the same order as they are in the original list. When there is a difference between the spelling of a name in the original list, and the unit roster, I have used the name in the roster.

His name is also borne as Murtaugh and Murtha. From The Medical and Surgical History of the War of the Rebellion:
Case # 1777 Private J. Murtagh, Co. B, 69th New York, aged 30 years, was wounded at Fredericksburg, December 13, 1862. Surgeon D. W. Bliss, U. S. V., reported the following history and contributed the specimen (Fig. 599). "The patient is a native of Ireland, of sanguine temperament, robust figure, strong constitution, has always enjoyed good health, and has been in the service four months. He was wounded at 1 P. M., while in the act of firing, the ball taking effect in the right arm. He laid on the field until dark, and then walked more than a mile, into Fredericksburg, where he remained until the next morning. He was carried in an ambulance wagon to Alexandria where his arm was bandaged and he was placed on board of a transport for Washington. December 14th, he was admitted to the Armory Square Hospital in the night, and no examination was attempted. December 15th, the general condition of the patient is good. Examination showed that the ball entered a little above the external condyle and emerged a little below the internal, causing a compound comminuted fracture of the humerus. The operation of resection was decided upon, and performed at 2 P. M. An S incision was made, commencing two inches above the elbow and extending the same distance below. The bone was found most terribly shattered. Both the condyles were removed, and the bone, as far as denuded of periosteus, taken off with the chain saw. In all, about three inches of the lower end of the humerus was removed, and numerous spiculae of bone were taken out. The ulna and radius were uninjured, as were also the attachments of the extensors and flexors of the arm. The incision was closed by sutures, the wound where the ball made its exit being deemed a sufficient opening for the discharge of the pus which may be formed. December 16th, the patient has stood the operation well and appears comfortable." On May 12th, the patient was transferred to De Camp Hospital, David's Island, New York Harbor, whence Acting Assistant Surgeon J. W. Dickie reported the following results in the case: "The wound was healed when admitted. There is a space of about one inch between the bones of the upper and lower arm. The motion of the wrist and fingers is not affected. With this exception the arm is useless, as there is no motion, except passive, of the elbow joint. The tissues around the joint are tender." On June 25th, the patient was transferred to the Veteran Reserve Corps at Fort Schuyler, and on April 29, 1864, he was discharged from the service and pensioned. In September, 1865, the pensioner was supplied with an apparatus by Dr. E. D. Hudson, of New York City, who described the injured arm as being "shortened one and a half inches." Examiner B. A. Watson, of Jersey City, December 11, 1873, certified: "Gunshot wound of right elbow, followed by excision. The arm hangs powerless at his side. This disability is equal to the loss of a limb for all purposes of manual labor, is total, third grade, and permanent." This pensioner was paid June 4, 1875.

The statement is made that "He was carried in an ambulance to Alexandria, where his arm was bandaged, and he was placed on board of a transport for Washington." This should read "He was carried in an ambulance to Aquia Landing, where his arm was bandaged, and he was placed on board of a transport for Washington." Alexandria is a long way from Fredericksburg, and there would be no need to place a patient on a transport (a boat) from there to Washington. Patients could be transported from Alexandria to Washington by ambulance.

D. P. Conyngham, in "The Irish Brigade and its Campaigns, states, on page 352:

"The flag of the Sixty-ninth was lost during the fight, and the men felt very uneasy about it, for it was their proud boast that they had never lost a flag. Next day the color-sergeant was discovered sitting up against a tree, dead, and his hands clasped to his breast, as if protecting something. Near him was the staff of the missing flag. When removing the body, the men found the flag wrapped around it, with a bullet hole right through it and his heart."

This flag was the National Color of the 69th New York. The Green Flag had been returned to New York for replacement.

William Delaney, Company I, is the last name on this list. Companies A and K were detailed as a flank guard, and were sent off to the right, to guard a knoll, so there are only two casualties listed for Company A, and none for Company K. Officers of these two companies were the only ones left who did not become casualties.

At the bottom of the last page of the original list is the statement "No signature of casualties."
I don't know what that means.

Company A 69th New York became Company F in January, 1864.

I will update this list as I get new information.
