REPORT.

GENERAL HEAD-QUARTERS, STATE OF NEW YORK, }
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
ALBANY, December 31, 1868. }

To His Excellency R. E. FENTON,

Governor and Commander-in-Chief:

SIR—I have the honor to present herewith, in accordance with the requirements of law, the annual report of this department for the year ending December 31st, 1868.

In the last annual report from this department an attempt was made to illustrate the importance of a well organized Militia, and to briefly discuss its relations to the government, Federal and State. These trite themes have necessarily engaged the attention of successive incumbents of the office I have the honor to occupy, since each has felt the radical necessity of public appreciation and support of all measures in a government which is essentially the direct reflection of the popular will. Though frequent reiteration of this fundamental importance of the Militia has not destroyed its significance, it is not the present purpose to repeat or enlarge upon the theoretical arguments presented last year. Since then it has been attempted to enlist popular consideration by practical treatment, and to this end important reforms have been instituted during the past year, which will be more specifically treated of beyond. The result of these reforms has been to place the National Guard in a state of efficiency never before equalled, and when supplemented by further improvements comprised in the general system as adopted, the citizen soldiery of our State will surpass in all respects any similar organization at home or abroad, and satisfy, in the highest degree, all the functions of a Militia, whether they be inherent, constitutional or legal.

The reduction of the aggregate force, as recommended in my last report, and subsequently enacted by the Legislature, has had a most happy effect, by an assurance to the people that weakly and sickly organizations would no longer be kept in existence by costly nursing, and that the day is past for Fallstaffian regiments with a vast pretence on paper, but presenting on inspection a mere group of commissioned officers. These make-shifts and shams had too long encumbered the rosters; a source of annual expense, scattered throughout the State, their notorious inefficiency and deception had aroused in many quarters indignant remonstrances, which were unfortunately and unjustly directed against the entire Militia system, of which these were merely the decayed branches or fungous outgrowth. This pruning of the force by disbandment has also had a most beneficial influence upon the more efficient organizations retained in service. Relieved from association with that which had forfeited public confidence or respect, and encouraged by a just discrimination, the remaining force has attained a higher degree of esprit de corps, and its military zeal and ambition has been vastly quickened.

It should, in justice, be stated here, that among the disbanded organizations were several distinguished for a martial spirit and vitality long exhibited under great discouragement. These regiments being located, however, in districts wholly rural and interior, the disadvantages for frequent assemblage occasioned by sparse population, could not be overcome by the most zealous endeavor, and casual drill and discipline only could be enforced, consequently falling far below the average standard of regiments more favorably situated. Besides these inconveniences, the local public sentiment, secure in the consciousness of peaceful intent, refused to acknowledge the necessity of other protection than the civil arm of the law provides. Under these circumstances it became my painful duty to disband several such regiments as of doubtful utility, and thus discharge from the service of the State, officers and members who had performed their duty to the best of their limited ability. By a circular issued from this department, and ordered to be read at the head of each regiment disbanded, the necessity for such action was plainly set forth, and your Excellency's acknowledgments for past services were freely accorded.

The introduction of a new system of tactics (Upton's) has enhanced the interest in the drill, and the veterans have been obliged to attend the school of instruction with the recent recruits. This commingling of the old and new members has conduced to a generous emulation productive of the best results, by a rapid and at the same time more uniform attainment in the ranks, while the officers have been obliged to apply themselves diligently, in order to keep in advance of their subordinates. The military proficiency thus achieved has been well evinced by the award conferred by disinterested judgment upon one of the New York city companies, as the militia company most advanced in Upton's tactics in the entire country, so far as the evidence of trial has been made.

Through general orders, many reforms and marked improvements have been instituted in organization and in the internal economy of companies and regiments, important and heretofore debatable principles have been determined, the regulations have in most respects been brought in close accord with the law, and every branch of the service has been assimilated, so far as practicable, to that of the United States army. Though the radical changes introduced by the law of 1862, and the influences of the late war, have been largely modified, the anterior relations and regulations, many practices and traditions originating in the earlier period, have continued to affect the subordinate administration, though frequently inconsistent with the letter or spirit of the law. In the ante-war period, the relations of the uniformed militia to the central administration were more weak and distant, and this partial independence led to diverse and incongruous practices. Lax discipline from above engendered laxity below, encouraged by the fundamental error of election of all officers by their subordinates. While the principle of election cannot be entirely abolished, since it possesses certain merits, and especially as it seems to be sustained by public sentiment, it has been essayed to control it within the strict limits of the law, and to extirpate the abuses that have originated from it.

The traditionary remembrance of former independence, and the popular and voluntary nature of the National Guard system, have rendered the gradual enforcement of stricter discipline a delicate task, but its difficulties have been diminished step by step as its beneficent results have been appreciated by those affected. Certain primary principles, which for a while had lost their significance, have thus been forcibly inculcated; among which may be mentioned the binding nature of enlistment in the National Guard as forming a contract with the State, by which, in consideration of certain privileges, the enlisted member assumes inviolable obligations, involving, to a deter-minate extent, his independence of action. This principle is the very basis of military subordination, and unless it be thoroughly appreciated and enforced, the entire military fabric is incoherent and unreliable. Weakened by neglect, which omitted any formal act of enlistment, and allowed an easy discharge from service, this principle required such development and confirmation as would establish its full force and significance. Every member of the National Guard is now required, upon enrollment in the force, to execute a contract known as an enlistment paper, which fully sets forth the obligations assumed, the original copy being filed in this office, and a duplicate retained in the company records. The entry into service being thus formalized and unequivocal, it becomes further necessary to sustain the inviolability of the obligation. A discharge from service upon frivolous grounds, indeed upon any grounds except those of an imperative nature, would obviously tend to a contempt of the original covenant. It has therefore been established, by law and regulations, that no private or non-commissioned officer can be discharged from service except for physical disability or expiration of term of service. It may be argued by those who view the State Military profession as a pastime, rather than a service in an important branch of the government, that such a rigid enforcement of the contract is unnecessarily severe. These might contend, with some plausibility, that a Militia system dealing with soldiers who are also engaged in civil pursuits should be more elastic and indulgent. But as regards the point just discussed, such arguments are specious, since any relaxation in this respect would be destructive.

The resignation of officers upon trivial pretexts had become an abuse so great in its proportions as to threaten the stability of the entire organization. Not only did frequent changes of officers injure the interests of the respective companies and regiments, but the easy exit from service by those holding commissions, demoralized their subordinates held to service by more rigorous rules. A commission being, in fact, a discharge, it was sought, not as an honor won by merit, but as a ready means of annulling the original compact whenever it became irksome. It was therefore one of my first administrative acts, to issue an order limiting the causes for which resignations would be accepted, and also taking the opportunity to make an acceptance contingent upon a certificate of non-indebtedness for public property.

The broad principle of the inviolability of the contract of service, both as to men and officers, being thus established, the application in secondary cases became easy. The most important of these was, to correct the abuse of the State service by those who were attracted to it by mere social advantages and pleasures, or a simple desire to enjoy the benefits conferred by legal exemptions. Such members performed their duties in a perfunctory manner, and considering the payment of fines as a commutation for duty, too often glided through their seven years and received honorable discharges, without the performance of enough duty to entitle them to promotion in the awkward squad. The National Guard, however, was not instituted for selfish and personal purposes; the mere exhibition on its rolls of names, however high sounding, has no value; nor are its designs confined to the assurance of a well drilled force, ready for exigency, but beyond this, to graduate veterans, who returning to the civil walks of life will be prepared, in the day of need, to officer and lead the volunteer armies of the State; it is, in fact, the military academy of the State. In such an institution, drones are an incumbrance and an imposition, and this has been recognized by the recent issue of orders that whenever a member shall be absent without excuse from three consecutive drills, the time so lost shall be made up by actual service, and not commuted by fines, which, however, may be imposed and collected as a matter of company discipline.

One of the most serious defects of the elective system being the elevation of incapable persons to be commissioned officers, a successful attempt to counteract this fault has been made through the means of examining boards, composed of highly qualified officers. The influence of these boards, for the past two years, has in every respect been beneficial and satisfactory, by purging the service of incompetent officers and by elevating the standard of qualification. These gratifying results have been recognized and conceded by commanding officers, and fully justify the continuance of such boards, as a permanent antidote to the most marked evils of the elective system. Regimental boards for examination of non-commissioned officers have also been provided, since these grades not only comprise the nursery of officers, but incompetency in them as seriously affects the discipline and morale of the organization as wherever exhibited in higher positions.

While it has thus been attempted to promote the general welfare and elevate the dignity of the service, due attention has been paid to such matters as affect the internal economy of the regiments and companies, by the reformation of defective regulations, the issue of new ones when requisite, and the abolition of those that had become obsolete. Space and time will not permit a detailed statement of these reforms, but it may be generally stated that they were based upon the principles hitherto discussed, and that the objects kept constantly in view were to protect the rights and privileges of members, to enforce their obligations, to maintain the proper authority of officers and compel their responsibility, and to strengthen that claim of mutual dependence and accountability which, extending from the highest to the lowest grades, forms the vital bond of the military system.

Nothing demonstrated more forcibly the incoherent nature of the Militia organization prior to 1862, than the defective character of the whole system of reports and returns; in fact there was no system, but ancient forms and incongruous practices, extending in some cases half a century back, and originally adapted to laws and regulations long obsolete, were retained in use. Some changes were made by the law of 1862, though many ancient and defective forms were still retained, but no coherent system was adopted. While something in this respect remains to be done, great improvements have been recently effected, and which will be briefly stated. The previous practice of official reports and communications from regimental and even company officers, direct to these headquarters, has been abolished in such commands where the same could be made effective without detriment to the general interests of the command, and all such papers now pass through the intermediate commanders, who are thus properly cognizant of all that affects their commands, and can make appropriate endorsements upon all papers for the information of their superiors. Communications from these headquarters are in like manner transmitted through the intermediate commanders, and the same regulations apply to all official papers, whatever their source or ultimate destination. These regulations, which to the unaccustomed appeared to involve a useless expenditure of time and labor, are now conceded to economize both, while the thorough acquaintance of all that concerns his command attained by each officer, promotes discipline and consequent efficiency.

The most complete instructions regarding the annual muster and inspection rolls have been published during the past year. These rolls furnish the statistics and information upon which is based the general administration of the entire force, while they constitute the records of the several commands and the military history of the individual members. To secure accuracy in these important reports has been a constant aim, and the efforts made during the past year have effected a marked improvement, which will increase as officers become more conversant with instructions and are compelled a compliance by their immediate superiors. The advance in this respect already made is very gratifying, and our officers, if ordered into active service now, could make up very creditable rolls, while it is a well known fact that when in service during the late war but few officers of our militia regiments had the slightest knowledge of this important part of their duties.

The annual muster-rolls are, in their present form, as complete and exhaustive in information as a return of such nature could be made, and cover the annual military history of each company, its officers and members, and full returns of the company property. In their preparation company officers are assisted by the company books now required to be kept; in fact the rolls are merely abstracts from such books when systematically and promptly posted. These company and regimental books, under the close inspection now enjoined, mark another great improvement in the regulations, and initiate a series of records that, under rigid supervision and compulsion, will make the company and regimental archives of the National Guard models of completeness and method.

In this connection, reference may be appropriately made to the recent regulations relative to dropping delinquent members from the rolls. Heretofore the rolls of many regiments were encumbered by the names of persons who had failed to report for duty, often for years, and no provision being made for relief these names were annually repeated, conveying a false impression of the actual effective strength of the company or regiment. Such persons could not be discharged, and such a course would be impolitic by opening an easy means of evading legal demands. It has therefore been provided that the names of such persons may be dropped from the rolls, and upon return to duty, taken up upon the next rolls, the time so lost being made up before an honorable discharge is granted.

The system of returns of property in the possession of the National Guard has been much improved by the present chiefs of the Ordnance and Quartermaster's Departments, and a more strict accountability has been enforced against all officers responsible for such property. The bonds for military stores hitherto filed in this Department, have been transferred to the Ordnance Department as a more appropriate place of deposit, there to be thoroughly revised, those satisfied by the return or transfer of property to be canceled, and additional ones required when necessary to cover unsecured stores. The annual returns of ordnance have been greatly perfected as to form and completeness, and their execution enforced through the subordinate officers of that Department, and when the entire system, as devised, is carried into effect and supplemented by rigorous inspections, this branch of the service will be beyond criticism.

FUTURE DEVELOPMENT.

Such is a brief sketch of some of the improvements that have been instituted within the past two years, and reference will elsewhere be made to others. In all of them the object has been to enforce as complete and strict discipline as may be compatible with the nature of the National Guard, and the results thus far developed have been such as to afford entire satisfaction. It is not too much to say that no militia organization in this country ever before reached such a standard, and the State may well be proud of her citizen-soldiery. But gratifying as this progress is, it may and should be further advanced. The reformatations and improvements carried into effect, are but a portion of the systematic plan as devised, but which, from want of time and opportunity could not be fully instituted. In addition to the labors already adverted to, the past year has been devoted to the reduction of the aggregate force; the reclamation of property in the possession of the disbanded organizations; the adjustment of the legal liabilities of such organizations, and to the additional duties imposed upon this Department by the consolidation into it of other departments previously distinct. All these labors, in addition to the routine duties, and those connected with settlements of the war matters, have so engaged time, as to render impossible the execution of a complete plan of administration.

From the first, the idea of any military system that should, so far as sustentation of active force is concerned, be general throughout the State, has been abandoned. Theoretically such a general enforcement is in all respects advisable, but practically, it is a failure. Our people will not recognize the necessity of any such system as the Prussian or Swiss, which enlists the service of all, nor will popular sentiment ever sustain a uniform distribution throughout the State of the small active force. Neither legal enactments nor earnest and zealous administrative action have availed in the execution of such a plan, and it must be abandoned. Consequently it has been the policy to concentrate the active force where it can be best sustained, and is most needed. It has been urged that such a course would arouse opposition to the collection of the military taxes, upon the ground that as no local force was sustained, the tax would be an unjust imposition. The fallacy of this argument will be elsewhere exposed, and even should it have weight, the proposition of an equal distribution will be further from realization than ever. But this concentration renders the general administrative duties comparatively easy, and affords opportunities for improvements that with a scattered force would be impossible. More rigid discipline can be promoted and the relations of the several organizations rendered more close, while the relative expenditure of time and money is proportionately reduced.

So far as regulations regarding correspondence, reports, records, &c., are concerned, but little remains to be done, but there is a broad field for advancement in tactical instruction and other education in active military duties. As having a financial bearing upon the ability to make this advancement, the question of the issue of uniforms by the State may here be appropriately discussed. Experience is unqualifiedly opposed to such issues, and the principle is confessed to be injurious by the commanders of all first-class regiments. The issue of gratuitous clothing has lowered the standard of membership, impaired the esprit-de-corps, and created jealousies and discontent; the uniforms have not been properly cared for and preserved, and finally the State pattern has been gradually abandoned, and the several organizations have returned to the distinctive dress respectively hallowed by associations of the past. The effort during the past year has been confined to an equalization of the distribution, preparatory to an entire abandonment of the system, and lack of funds has alone delayed such equalization and consequent conclusion. With proper inducements every National Guardsman would cheerfully provide his own uniform, and, as personal property, he would take more care of it. But arguments are unnecessary in a matter that is universally conceded. The funds appropriated hitherto for clothing would thus become available for the more useful purposes of encampments and target practice. The drills and exercises of the National Guard are now confined to such as can be performed within the armory walls, with the exception of an occasional field-day, when the fatigue of preparation and marching to the field and return, exhaust strength and time with but narrow margin for field instruction. Consequently brigade movements are seldom practiced, and even battalion instruction is limited and unsatisfactory. Encampments give ample opportunity for such instruction, and also in the important duties of camp and garrison, no less necessary in active service. The departments of the engineer, quartermaster, and commissary can only be developed by such means. But more important than all is the opportunity for target practice and instruction, which now is most lamentably neglected. It is not improbable that there are many National Guardsmen who have served their entire term and been graduated as accomplished in all that relates to tactical movements, and yet whose muskets, during the entire seven years, have been innocent of the influences or use of powder. This seems ludicrous, but it is nevertheless true that the very acquirement that makes the soldier has been almost completely ignored. It was well expressed in the report of the board for the examination of breech-loading arms, appended to my last report, that, "The laborious winter drills of the National Guard serve an excellent end, but the ultimate purpose of the soldier is the effective use of his weapons, and while we drill and discipline him in all the manœuvres that contemplate him solely as the fraction of a tactical whole, we should not neglect the individual instruction as a marksman, to which all other drill is merely auxiliary, and which alone renders him formidable when detached or acting in hostile concert with his fellows."

Your excellency has fully recognized the value of encampments as a means of instruction, and has commended the appropriation of money for this purpose in your annual messages, but without response by the Legislature. It has been my earnest effort to contrive means whereby encampments could be ordered, but I have only succeeded to a very limited extent, as the funds at disposal were scarcely sufficient to meet other and unavoidable demands. But in the future, with ample revenue afforded by the present system of enrollment and tax, and the other expenditures reduced by the present retrenchment in departmental expenses, and by an abandonment of the issue of clothing by the State, there will be ample means for an encampment of a large portion of the force every year. The system of target practice would require but slight elaboration as the successful plan adopted by the English Volunteer force, would form an admirable basis.

While the annual inspection of the entire force furnishes a yearly summary of statistics and comparison, intermediate inspections of the regiments, without long published notice, should be made by brigade and division commanders and reported to these head-quarters. Frequent consolidated returns of drills, parades, &c., should be made in order to acquaint the commander-in-chief with the condition of the several commands. Brigade and division ordnance and quartermaster officers should make frequent inspections of property, and report the same to the chiefs of those departments.

A thorough revision of the regulations regarding courts martial was intended to be made, but, as stated, press of other duties has prevented. The present General Regulations are in many respects inconsistent with the law, and also can be greatly amended as to procedure and practice, in order to conform more closely to that of the United States Army, and to the improved civil practice, so far as practicable. The present work should be revised at an early day, so that its provisions will correspond to existing laws and to the customs and practices of the standing army of our country.

The present regulations forbidding the employment of judge advocates in regimental courts should be enforced, and the unnecessary employment of special judge advocates in higher courts should be prohibited. Stringent regulations in regard to the collection of fines should be published. It is not an extreme statement that not over fifty per cent of the aggregate amount of fines is ever paid into the treasury. Sheriffs and other officers either neglect their duties or fail to make returns, and this is also true of the marshals appointed by the courts. When the collecting officer has not already given bonds he should be obliged to do so, and thorough responsibility as to returns should be enforced. This is an important trust, not only financially but as a matter of discipline, for if the sentences of the courts are not executed, their action and discipline fall into contempt.

It is a delicate question to decide the exact limits to which strictly military discipline can and should be carried, in a force like the National Guard. Due allowance must be made for civil, social and domestic duties, and proper consideration paid to the high character, refinement and pride of the members who are drawn from the elite of our young citizens. Each regiment through very natural causes, is, apart from its military relations, a social club, and though in its latter aspect entirely subordinate to its proper function, yet nevertheless deserving consideration.

The several companies admit members by ballot as in a club, and this is the preliminary movement to secure congeniality, and is so far strictly extra military, though essential to the harmony and esprit de corps of the organization. The novice thus elected, then executes his enlistment contract which makes him a member of the National Guard. This transaction is purely military. So much has been premised in order to determine the rights of companies to expel members. The law of 1862 as originally passed, conferred the power of expulsion for infraction of company by-laws. The amendments of 1864, however, by enacting that no private, musician, or non-commissioned officer should be discharged from service except for expiration of term of service or physical disability, practically abolished the power of expulsion. It is evident that such power should not be conferred upon inferior authority, to be exercised for minor offenses, and withheld from the higher authority, even when invoked to punish the most serious misdemeanor. Entire freedom of selection is given in the choice of associates, and when that action is confirmed and the State has formally accepted the recruit, there should be no power of reconsideration except for the most grave reasons. To give a company this power to annul a State contract would be not only unwise, but subversive of discipline. The infraction of company by-laws consists generally in non-attendance at company meetings and failure to pay consequent fines. Such delinquencies should surely be punished by court-martial; but if the penalty be simply a discharge by expulsion, there is a premium offered for delinquencies to any member who finds his contract of service irksome or inconvenient. But there may be cases where the general character or misconduct of a member may be so offensive and flagrant as to render association with him odious and injurious to the service, yet the offenses may not be punishable by a court-martial, and the only remedy would appear to be a disgraceful expulsion. Fully appreciating these points, I have, during the past year, made suitable regulations in these cases; but further action by amendment of the law, and additional regulations thereunder, would be advisable.

This brief outline for future development must suffice; it has been given simply as advisory, and the matured result of experience. The most essential point is to afford means for a more complete education of our troops in active military duties. The present system of in-door exercise, reports, returns, and other sedentary duties, does not require much amendment or extension, but ample opportunity remains for that practical instruction in the field, that, bringing into actual use former lessons and acquisitions, illustrates their purposes and consolidates and develops them into the accomplishments of the perfect soldier.

I now turn to a consideration in detail, of several subjects that demand more of a special attention than has hereinbefore been bestowed upon them, and which have claimed more particularly my efforts and labor during the year.

DISBANDED ORGANIZATIONS.

In pursuance of the recommendation in my former report, the Legislature of 1868 reduced the maximum number of the uniformed Militia to thirty thousand (30,000) non-commissioned officers, musicians and privates. This was a wise and provident act. Whilst it necessitates the disbandment of a few creditable organizations that had, so far as was practicable, become familiarized in the science of military, and of others that for years had but maintained skeleton outlines, it enabled me, by your orders, to dissolve those commands located in sparsely settled districts of the State, and retain those in the cities and larger villages, the former being regarded rather as a burden on the aggregate force, and the latter only, being in a condition for actual service should any sudden exigencies demand their use. With this idea in view, I issued General Orders No. 14, which relieved the organization of forty-two regiments of Infantry, one battery of Artillery, and the company organizations in seven regiments of infantry, the regimental organizations in these latter having previously been sundered.

I am satisfied that a further reduction would reflect credit upon the National Guard, and give greater tone and dignity to the entire command. A smaller force, well instructed, thoroughly equipped in every particular, wisely located, and carefully taught in every branch that insures the true soldier; through the drill of the company and battalion, through the system of encampments and target practice, is of more vital service to the State, than a larger body but meagerly provided with all the essentials that are demanded to make a command of importance and of lasting credit to a commonwealth like ours. But little complaint has been made to the order previously mentioned, and to the credit of the officers in command of the disbanded organizations, a ready response was given in nearly every instance to the provisions of the order. The work involved great labor, and required the personal attention and supervision of those in command; it has progressed very satisfactorily, and but little remains undone. The order required a return of all State property in possession of the organizations; the companies were all mustered out in due form, four copies of the rolls being required; discharges were furnished the men, and provision made for the credit of their service in any subsequent command they might join. Muster-out-rolls have been received from nearly all the regiments disbanded, and with but a very few exceptions all the commands were mustered out under the provisions of General Orders No. 14; those that failed to comply with the terms of said order, were formally mustered out and discharged the service by the issuance of General Orders No. 29. I could not refrain from expressing in said latter orders a few words of censure to those commands whose officers failed, and absolutely refused a compliance with previous orders. Their acts were subversive of discipline, and rendered them liable to severe punishment.

The State is thus relieved from a large expense required to maintain these organizations, and the localities are likewise benefited in being freed from the issuance of exemptions on property, and from the expense of maintaining armories and armorers.

I feel assured that the force, as now constituted, is sufficiently large for all practical purposes, and rather than be suffered to increase, should be diminished. Far better would it be, and greater the credit to the State, if the money appropriated should be used in fully and completely arming and equipping a small command, rather than use it in pro rata amounts amongst the many.

REGIMENTAL FUND OF THE DISBANDED REGIMENTS.

The annual appropriation provided in section 157, Military Code, to be paid the organizations of the National Guard upon certain expressed conditions being complied with, and for which payment for the year 1867, provision was made by the last Legislature, was withheld from those commands disbanded by General Orders No. 14, and it was provided in said orders for the presentation of all regimental accounts to me for examination and audit, to be paid by the Comptroller through the treasurer of the county, if found to be correct and a proper charge against said fund.

This fund is provided the regiments for payment of incidental, court martial and other necessary expenses attending the maintenance of the organizations. I have only allowed such portion of the appropriation to each organization as the accounts presented would warrant, and in this way have made a saving to the State of a sum sufficient to pay all the expenses attending the closing up of the affairs of the large number of commands disbanded.

ARSENALS OF THE STATE.

The State has four large arsenals for the storage of property, located respectively in the cities of New York, Albany, Rochester, and Buffalo; with the exception of the Rochester arsenal, the others are the arsenals provided in orders for the issuance of property. In addition to the above, are several smaller arsenals belonging to the State, and located as follows: In Schoharie county, in Essex county, in Ogdensburgh, Syracuse, Batavia, Ballston Spa, Norwich, Dunkirk, Corning, and Schenectady.

I have always been of the opinion that it is unwise to build any additional arsenals other than the four first named, and that it would be better to dispose of all save those located in New York, Albany, Buffalo, and Rochester, either by sale, or gift to the localities in which the same are located, with the condition that the State is to be relieved from all further expense connected with their maintenance. In some of the localities above named there is no organized military force, and the buildings are useless for the purposes for which erected; they however require a yearly expenditure of money to keep them in repair, which seems an unnecessary burden on the people. The four arsenals heretofore mentioned are all that are absolutely necessary for the practical uses of the military of the State, and I submit whether it would not be for the general good to dispose of all others.

Ample provision is made by law, requiring the boards of supervisors in the several counties to furnish the companies of the National Guard with suitable armories, the rent of the same to be a charge against the county. Arsenals are only required for the storage of the property of the State not in use.

The disposal of all the arsenals, save the four above excepted, would make a saving to the finances of the State, and not be disastrous to the welfare of the National Guard.

ENROLLMENT AND TAX.

The amendment to the Military Code, passed at the last Legislative session, and providing for the enrollment of those liable to military duty, and the assessment and collection of the military tax through the agencies of the assessors and collectors of civil taxes, has been approved by the results. Under previous systems the enrollments cost large sums of money without any corresponding benefit. Under the amended law, the enrollment has been more thorough, and there is no doubt but that a large revenue for military purposes will be collected. The lowest estimate of the amount, after making suitable allowances for contingencies, is three hundred thousand dollars, ($300,000), a sum amply sufficient to sustain the maximum force in a high condition of equipment and efficiency. It will undoubtedly be a constant necessity for those upon whom the responsibility of the public defense devolves, to resist the attacks that are annually made upon our military system. It is a cheap means of obtaining notoriety as an economist, to urge the abolition of the military organization, or its starvation by inadequate supplies; but an intelligent Legislature, appreciating these forays at their full value, and regarding its own Constitutional duties and responsibilities, will pause before it demolishes a fabric so essential to the safety of the State, and brought to its present perfection by such an expenditure of time, labor and money. The present provision for enrollment and collection of the military tax is the result of long experience and study, and it should be the earnest duty of every one interested in our Militia, and in the welfare of the body politic, to preserve the law and ensure its enforcement. The great principal that governs in the establishment of the present law, is that every person between fixed ages owes to his State military service, and if he is not called upon to perform the same, he should pay a small tax in lieu thereof, for the support of the organized force. It would seem that this principle, so broad and just, should not, in its operation, be questioned or objected to; but the action of a few local legislative bodies is to the contrary. They would wipe out the entire military organization and leave the State, in a time of hurried need, without the means for prompt and effective defense. There is no other principle so perfectly in accord with the laws of obligatory service, of duty and fidelity to one's State and country, as is this. By this requirement, every man contributes his just share for the maintenance of the organized body, which is for the defence of the State, and thereby is the Nation properly and adequately defended, without recourse to large standing armies.

In a time of peace every good citizen is agreed that we need a small military force; more especially is this required in the cities, where large bodies of desperate men are to be found, ever ready to commit deeds of violence and bloodshed for the accomplishment of their fiendish purposes, but who, through the presence of the military as a support to the civil authorities, are intimidated and restrained in the commission of their nefarious practices. Whilst the residents of the country do not appreciate the organization as much as those who live in the cities, they are just as much protected in life and property. To them the teachings of the past few years should not be lightly disregarded, or permitted to go unheeded. The small sum of money now required yearly to sustain the present force is but a drop in the bucket, as compared with an amount that without the military might be required to meet a sudden emergency.

INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

Upon the first day of June last the Inspector-General's department was consolidated into this department, the only officer of the former retained on duty being Colonel Silas W. Burt, Assistant Inspector-General. This consolidation formed a portion of the plan of retrenchment in military expenses, which your Excellency had gradually put in execution as the interests of the public service would allow. The advance in the organization of the National Guard, and the reduction of the force, rendered this action advisable. Since the consolidation, the routine duties of the Inspector-General's department have been continued as theretofore, and I would refer to the accompanying reports of Colonel Burt as to the transactions in the auditing bureau and other sub-divisions during the past year. In order to secure a thorough examination of the military funds in the hands of county treasurers, and an inspection in regard to general military matters throughout the State, I had such examination and inspection made by Colonels Burt and J. B. Stonehouse, Assistant Adjutant-General. Their reports have not only suggested means for a more thorough revision of the administration of the regimental funds, and a proper recognition of the responsibility concerning them, but have also enabled the collection of a large amount of public property which would otherwise have been lost or destroyed, and to which matter more particular reference is elsewhere made. Desiring a thorough inspection of the regiments in the First and Second Divisions, I detailed, by your orders, for that purpose, Brigadier-General J. Henry Liebenau, Commissary-General of Subsistence, who had performed a similar duty in 1866, and whose long and familiar acquaintance with the organizations in those divisions, peculiarly fitted him for the task. General Liebenau, as Acting Assistant Inspector-General, was present at the annual muster and inspection of all the commands in the dis-strict allotted to him, and made an independent and strict inspection of each organization, and also of their quarters, company and regimental property, books and records. This laborious duty was discharged in a most thorough, creditable and impartial manner; his report thereof will be found among the documents appended hereto.

PAYMASTER-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

The labor in this Department during the year has been confined to the settlement of a few unpaid bounty claims. There is occasionally a person, from the many applications made, entitled to payment under the several bounty laws. The Legislature should pass some law fixing a date for the reception of all further applications, and beyond which no payments will be made. I would suggest that the 1st of June, 1869, be established as such day. Nearly four years has elapsed since the war closed, and sufficient time has been afforded all persons entitled, under the provisions of the several bounty laws, to present their claims. During the year just closed, the report of the Paymaster-General (which accompanies this report) shows to have been paid in gross amount about forty-five hundred dollars ($4,500). The office might properly be made a part of the Adjutant-General's Department, and the labor performed under the direction of the chief of said Department, by one of his employees. During the past year the Assistant Paymaster-General has spent the greater portion of his time in the examination of the unsettled accounts against the United States.

BUREAU OF MILITARY STATISTICS.

By law, and through your orders, this Bureau, on the first of May last, was transferred to the Department of the Adjutant-General, where it properly belongs; it having heretofore been maintained as an independent Bureau. It contains the flags borne by the volunteer regiments in the late war, and, in addition, many valuable trophies and mementoes of the war that enlist the attention and interest of the many visitors. It should be continued in its present form and location until some provision is made of a more substantial character, either by the construction of a building specially adapted to its wants, and which might appropriately include the very many and interesting historical relics of the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, and the Mexican struggle, and other matters intimately associated with the history of the State; or, if this is not done, a suitable place for the reception of the flags and trophies should be set aside in the new capitol.

VOLUNTEER DEPARTMENT.

During the past year the labors of this office in connection with matters relating to the late war, have continued without diminution. The records of officers and enlisted men have been corrected, and every source of information has been exhausted in the endeavor to secure a perfect registry of the grand armies the State of New York placed in the field. Numerous applications have been daily made for evidences of enlistment, in order to substantiate the claims of soldiers, their widows and orphans, for pensions and arrears of pay. Frequent searches have been made on behalf of the citizens of this and other States, to discover traces of relatives long missing and supposed to have enlisted in our volunteer force. Many such searches are made on behalf of foreigners, often at the request of the representatives of their respective Governments, and not unfrequently information has been given that relieved anxious hearts, or replaced weary uncertainty by the sad but final assurance of death on the battlefield or in hospital. In many cases the disposition of property depends upon the evidences furnished. In addition to these applications, certificates from this office are constantly required for many other purposes connected with the late war, and these applications will necessarily continue for years.

I would again most earnestly call attention to the necessity of some immediate provision for the preservation and security of the records of this office. I would repeat all that I urged in my last annual report, and add that time has confirmed my views as then expressed. The great State of New York should cherish these records, not alone for their personal value to her gallant soldiers and their descendants and heirs, but also as proud archives of the patriotism and valor of her sons.

Two volumes of my last report were devoted to the history of the Volunteer regiments of our State, and the officers who belonged to the same, furnishing valuable information, and a history that will outlive the present, and increase in value each succeeding year and generation.

FINAL.

As has before been remarked, the National Guard of this State is organized upon a solid basis; its organization has been made to conform to that of the United States Army so far as is practicable, and in its general outlines it presents a command well disciplined, well instructed, around which clusters a record of services, brilliant and honorable in every field in which it has been called into active use. Whilst its discipline does not partake of all that rigidity that belongs to a standing army, it nevertheless in so far as the compliance with the orders governing same is in a condition of marked improvement, and when the general system as established shall have been fully introduced, a record will be presented that will compare favorably with any volunteer command. In this particular it is hoped that every officer will exhibit a deeper interest and desire to secure such a condition of discipline and deportment as will achieve the results aforementioned for all time.

There is no country so careless of its volunteer militia as our own. Was the military service as burdensome here as in Europe, there might be some excuse for the anathemas hurled against it by men who are not yet convinced of the propriety of "in a time of peace to prepare for war," or the murmurings and fault findings of those who are called upon to bear the burdens, might be more in reason and more justifiable. Experience has been to us, and is to every country, a valuable teacher, and the lessons taught should linger now and forever in the minds of our people, to the end that the rights and privileges of the National Guard may be firmly and securely established and protected, as against any local discrimination or disturbance, or in the event of a more active need of its services. The cry of "down with the National Guard" should be looked upon as the frailty of a diseased mind. The organization has existed since the foundation of our State, and its necessity has grown with its growth, and now to eradicate it entire, would be a suicidal act to the interests and prosperity of our civil government. Its importance and worth are well and forcibly expressed by Lieutenant-General Sherman in a letter to the writer; he says: "I hope your State will always take the same interest now felt in the organization and equipment of a proper form of militia and volunteers, which was of vital use to our nation in the past war, and may be of still greater use in the future."

The National Guard should be instructed thoroughly in the means secured by encampments. Nothing would add so much to its development and discipline as by bringing together for a number of days a portion of the force each year and an intimate acquaintance established with all that belongs to the life of the soldier. The limited means heretofore provided for the maintenance of the National Guard has, as before remarked, prevented ordering a part of the command into a camp of instruction, but it is hoped that from the large amount of money that will be raised under the enrollment law that this end will soon be attained. This would increase the interest in the organization, and be an incentive for securing the best material in its ranks. It is a valuable part of a young man's education that is secured by a service in our National Guard regiments. He is habituated to the laws of submission and obedience, and learns to discipline himself so that the effect is not confined to his relations as a soldier, but is extended to every condition of life. The simple fact of a man's being a member of the local militia makes him a better citizen. He sees the necessity of proper subordination and discipline, and feels the responsibility which rests on him as a member of the right arm of the civil power, thereby indicating in him a proper respect and submission to lawful authority. A connection of this nature possesses another advantage, which in a moral point of view is most important. It gives the youth a healthful exercise and rational amusement, which keeps them from the haunts of common dissipation. When they leave the rooms of military instruction they carry with them, among their associates, a sense of pride which restrains them from any exhibition of coarseness or unsoldierlike demeanor.

During the year, with the active co-operation of the Commissary-General of Ordnance, I have labored to collect what property of the State, loosely scattered and in the possession of parties not liable for its security, as came to my knowledge. The careless manner of issuing property, existing but a few years ago, has left a large amount in different portions of the State, there being no record of the same in the departments; chance, has simply furnished the information as to its wherabouts, and when known, I have taken immediate steps for its return to the possession of the State. In this way a considerable amount of valuable property has been secured. I have no doubt but that there is much more stored away in different localities that should be returned.

I am under the impression that the National Guard would be benefited by reducing the term of service from seven years to five. The former service seems too long, and is liable to occasion an irksomeness and a feeling of disinterestedness on the part of those who belong to the organization that results to its disadvantage. Whereas, a reduction of the term of service to five years, would be a strong incentive to that class of young men reaching the age of eighteen, to connect themselves with some National Guard regiment. They would rally much more eagerly, and be more prompt and active in the discharge of their duties, than if the longer period prevailed. Their interest would be quickened, and I believe the ranks of the different organizations would be better filled, both as regards numbers and material. The Army of the United States wisely adopted this change, and have experienced a corresponding benefit therefrom. The service in the State Volunteer Army should not be made burdensome, but it should be governed so as to render it at all times attractive and for the general good.

In relinquishing my present position, I shall continue to take a lively and friendly interest in the future of the National Guard. I shall watch its development with earnest and hopeful solicitude, and shall expect its steady growth and perfection in the practices that now attach to it, which if strictly followed, will give it an importance that belongs to no other Volunteer Militia. I have labored industriously to secure such reforms and changes as I believed for the best, and time, I trust, will sanction all the modifications I have inaugurated.

In severing our official intercourse I have to express to you my cordial and hearty thanks for the confidence and kindness you have always extended to me. During your entire administration you have furnished lasting proofs of your friendship for the military arm of our State Government, by your acts and in your messages, and I feel confident your services will be long and faithfully remembered.

I desire to give this public expression of thanks to General J. H. Libenau, Commissary-General of Subsistence, for the prompt and creditable performance of the delicate trust committed to him.

Colonel S. W. Burt, Assistant Inspector-General and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, is deserving of my warmest commendation and honorable attestation for the services rendered me during the past year.

Colonel J. B. Stonehouse, Assistant Adjutant-General, has faithfully and satisfactorily discharged the duties of his position and ably seconded me in my labors.

To Major Alfred H. Taylor, Chief Clerk, and the other employees of the office, I make my warmest acknowledgments for the satisfactory and generous manner in which they have labored to discharge the varied and important trusts committed to them.

The appendices that accompany this report will furnish a full history of the condition of the National Guard, to which your attention and that of the Legislature is respectfully invited.

I am, sir, very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

SELDEN E. MARVIN,

Adjutant-General.

INSPECTION REPORT

ON CONDITION OF FIRST AND SECOND DIVISIONS, NATIONAL GUARD.

REPORT OF BRIGADIER-GENERAL J. H. LIEBENAU.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14th, 1868.

Brigadier-General S. E. MARVIN,

Adjutant-General S. N. Y.:

GENERAL—I have the honor to respectfully submit the following as my report of inspections, made in the First and Second Divisions of the National Guard of the State, in compliance with Special Order No. , current series, General Head-quarters.

FIRST BRIGADE—INFANTRY.

October 13th—Reviewed 71st Regiment this day, at 11 A. M., on Tompkins square. The regiment is under command of Lieutenant-Colonel Harry Rockafeller, a competent and brave officer, who attested his devotion to his country upon the battle-field, where he lost an arm in its sacred cause, during the late struggle for the suppression of the rebellion. The regiment paraded with full ranks and made a fine appearance. The ceremony of review was well conducted, the marching of the men was good, the alignments and distances well preserved, and the salutes of the officers correct. The discipline of the regiment is good, and from the steadiness of the men, both in line and on the march, I am of opinion that the company officers are efficient and zealous in the discharge of their duties. From the general appearance of officers and men I can safely say that this is one of the best regiments in the division, and it is easy to predict for it a brilliant future. A new full uniform has been adopted by this command, which I have not yet seen, but as it meets with general approval from officers and men it will doubtless add, during the coming years, to the numbers recruited. Later in the day I accompanied the mustering officer, Major Gillen, during his inspection and muster, and was only the more confirmed in my former impressions in regard to discipline, and general attention to duties, on part of officers as well as men.

October 13th—At 12 o'clock this day I accompanied Major Gillen in his inspection and muster of 2d Regiment. I found the regiment under command of its Lieutenant-Colonel, Colonel Reid being absent. The appearance of officers and men, with but very few exceptions is anything but creditable; indeed, there seems to be an utter lack of interest on the part of most of the command, officers and men. The men are not all uniformed alike, some wearing the (new) gray uniform, while others appeared in the old State uniform; but very few in either uniform presenting a decent appearance; some men had cartridges boxes, others had none; some had cap pouches, while others had none, indeed, the entire appearance of the command is a disgrace to the National Guard.

There is an utter lack of discipline in almost every company, and I think, if let alone, this regiment will die a natural death; but this course would be an injustice to other commands, and I cannot make any such recommendations.

I reviewed and inspected this regiment two years ago, and at that time, the appearance of the regiment was so disgraceful that I could scarcely find it consistent with my duty not to recommend its disbandment. During these two years it has gone from bad to worse, and forbearance on the part of the State would now become a gross wrong. I am satisfied that in case of this regiment, under its present organization, being called upon to perform any duty, it would be utterly incapable of rendering the State any service. In view of these facts I would respectfully recommend that this regiment be disbanded immediately, and mustered out of the service. After the inspection I reviewed the regiment, the whole ceremony was performed in a careless and slovenly manner, in the standing review, the men were unsteady and careless, and, in the march, scarcely an officer saluted properly, while some entirely omitted this part of the ceremony.

October 13th—At 2 o'clock this p. m. I inspected 12th Regiment. This is really a fine regiment in every particular, it is under a fine state of discipline and drill, and is well uniformed, armed and equipped. The inspection and muster was made by Major Gillen, and was entirely satisfactory. The muster rolls were carefully and correctly made out, and the equipments of the men were in good condition. The appearance of the men, and their movements, steady and attentive, gave conclusive evidence of attention to duty on the part of officers, and of interest on the part of the men. There was only one drawback to all that seemed so nearly perfect, and this was, the absence of two of the companies from inspection; upon inquiry, I learned they had been excused from this most necessary of all parades, for the purpose of going upon a pleasure trip. Where a commanding officer of a regiment finds his authority to excuse a portion of his command from the performance of a duty, the execution of which he rigidly exacts of other portions of same command, I have yet to learn; and granting even the authority, it is a supererogation which should never be used upon any such occasion as the annual parade for inspection and review. The commanding officers of this regiment, and of the brigade are too good, and too well posted officers to be lax in such matters, and I find only the more reason for complaint in this view of the fact. The 12th Regiment is a fine command, and needs only continued vigilance and energy on the part of the officers to retain its present proud position; but the men should have fully inculcated the duty they owe first to the State as good citizens, and to their regiment as good soldiers, and on no occasion should whole companies be excused from parade upon any pretense whatever. After the inspection I reviewed the regiment. The review was good in most particulars. The Colonel committed the error of wheeling into column while the reviewing officer was on his way to the right of the regiment; this error was rectified, and the rest of the review was quite satisfactory. The marching was good, and the salutes of the officers as a general thing correct.

General Ward and a portion of his staff were present at the inspection of his brigade.

The inspection and muster of the brigade was made by Major Gillen, in a prompt and soldier-like manner. The Major understands his duties as Brigade-Inspector thoroughly. I have to thank General Ward for courtesies and aid, rendered in the discharge of my duties.

SECOND BRIGADE—INFANTRY.

October 15th—Reviewed the 1st Artillery, this day, at 1½ P. M., on Tompkins square.

The regiment paraded, dismounted, and most of the batteries were strong in numbers; some of them appeared in their newly adopted "Shakos;" this adds materially to the appearance of the command, and I trust this improvement may meet approval at head-quarters.

Battery K, of this regiment, made a splendid appearance, and, although the latest recruited, they are the strongest in the command; are a fine body of men, and well officered, indeed their appearance on inspection would have been a credit to any regular battery in our United States service. There is some irregularity in the pattern of sabre, worn by the men, and I would recommend that the State furnish enough of the same pattern to allow the regiment to be fully equipped, the uniforming they will attend to themselves.

The review was good, and the marching of the men would have put to blush many of our infantry organizations, the salutes of the officers were correct, the wheeling from column into line was executed with fewer intervals than occurred in many regiments, which should be better posted in these movements; as a whole the review was good. Colonel Teller, commanding the regiment, is a good officer, careful and prompt in the discharge of his duties, and zealous for the advancement of his command. The discipline in most of the companies is good, there are, however, two batteries which should be consolidated at once, and some few officers, whose loss would be a gain to the regiment. I would respectfully recommend that any application for consolidation of these companies, meet with prompt approval at your hands; justice to the really good companies demand that no delay should occur in this matter. I have to congratulate Colonel Teller upon the improved condition and appearance of his regiment during the past two years, and to wish him continued success in the future.

October 16th—Reviewed the 3d Regiment infantry this day, at 2 o'clock P. M., on Tompkins square. This is the famous Bendix Zouaves, commanded by Colonel and Brevet Brigadier-General Bendix, a good officer, and one deserving a better command.

The regiment turned out small in numbers; the review was performed in a very creditable manner on the part of the commanding officer and some of the company officers, but the men were, for the most part, careless; the marching was not good, nor the distances well preserved. Many of the officers' salutes were careless and improper, and one omitted the salute altogether.

From the general appearance, I am satisfied that they have not advanced since my last report; and knowing, as I do, that the Colonel and his Lieutenant-Colonel, as well as some of the company officers, are good, prompt and efficient officers, I am of the opinion that much of the lack of interest is traceable to the present style of uniform. I do not think it possible, in our National Guard, at least (if anywhere), to inculcate principles of steadiness, discipline or drill into a body of men uniformed in the careless, untidy and loose uniform of a zouave; the very dress itself is demoralizing, and should at once and forever be abandoned by our State troops; in the field it may answer well enough (although of this I have ever had my doubts), but for our National Guard it is altogether out of character; it is, besides, a decided copy of a not highly rated foreign corps, and is in no way national.

I think the three zouave regiments of the division might be consolidated into one good regiment; but, in order to make anything of them, either singly or united, the zouave uniform should be replaced by some other more useful (if not more ornamental) dress.

October 19th—Reviewed and inspected the 5th Regiment this day on Tompkins square, at 1½ o'clock P. M. The regiment paraded in full uniform, and with full ranks, making, thus far, the largest inspection—present—of any regiment in the division. The review was well conducted, the men were steady in the standing review, and marched well; ranks well aligned, and distance well preserved on the march. Officers, for the most part, saluted properly, but some of them neglected to look towards the reviewing officer; this is a fault which I find exists to a great extent in almost every regiment, and one for which commanding officers are responsible.

The 5th Regiment is one of the very best regiments in the National Guard of the State. The material cannot be better. The men feel a just pride in the appearance and welfare of their regiment, and many of them having been soldiers in their fatherland, they are capable of being instructed up to the very highest standard of discipline and drill; but, in order to occupy this proud position, they need a change in some of their officers, and this should be attended to immediately. One careless, uneducated officer does more harm to a command than it is in the power of ten good ones to overcome, and the commanding officers of regiments and brigades should look to it that no applications for commissions are forwarded without proper endorsements; it is not simply enough that a certificate of election be forwarded, but such endorsements should be made upon all such certificates as to leave no doubt in the mind of the Commander-in-Chief what course he should pursue. I am led to make these remarks here from the fact, of which I am fully convinced, that the 5th Regiment needs (in some cases) only good officers to make it in point of discipline and drill, as it is in point of numbers, second to none in the division.

The regiment is fully uniformed, armed and equipped, with the exception of knapsacks; these were used up in the Pennsylvania campaign.

October 20th—The 6th Regiment was this day reviewed by General Burger and Major Godfrey, Brigade-Inspector at 1½ P. M. on Tompkins square.

Owing to illness, which confined me at home, was unable to be present; shall review and inspect this regiment at a later day, in order to make my report complete, and will embody same in report of 2d Brigade.

October 21st—Inspected and passed around the flanks of 84th Regiment this day at their drill room; owing to the storm which prevailed, it was not possible to march the regiment to Division Parade Ground. In the drill room, it was impossible to execute the ceremony of review in full, or according to regulation; but this was no excuse for the commanding officer neglecting to salute, where the command did so. Although impossible to witness any movements of the command, I am convinced that there should be a change in many of the officers of this regiment at once. Some of the companies would pass inspection fairly, while others should be consolidated. The material of the regiment is good, and something could be made of this command, under good and efficient officers; but, if many of the present officers are allowed to remain in commission longer, there will be a decided decrease at next inspection, under the column of present.

The discipline of the regiment is not good, as a whole.

The regiment are about adopting a new uniform, a slight change from their present one, but a very decided improvement.

October 22d—Reviewed and inspected 96th Regiment on Tompkins square, this day, at 1½ o'clock P. M. The review was well conducted as a whole, men steady, ranks of officers, non-commissioned officers, and men well aligned, marching good, distance well preserved, and salutes of most of the officers good. The regiment made a fine appearance, strong in numbers, are fully uniformed, armed and equipped, with the exception of knapsacks.

Preceding inspection, I found the drum corps were in a state of insubordination and mutiny. I at once directed them sent away from their position, upon the right of their companies, placed under arrest, and to have them court-martialed. It seems this is a trouble of long standing; and, from what I could learn, the Colonel has not been properly sustained in his efforts to enforce discipline. Some of the company officers have sustained the drummers in their action, and have thus placed themselves in a position, which may subject them to a court-martial.

This state of affairs has led to a loss of discipline in the entire regiment, and, I trust, the company officers may be made to feel that, before being able to enforce discipline, they must first learn the wholesome lesson of submitting to it themselves.

This is a good regiment, large in point of numbers, and well uniformed, needs only, in some cases, good officers to make it equal to any in the division. The commanding officer of the brigade (if the colonel of the regiment fails), should see to it that a better state of discipline prevails.

November 25th—Reviewed and inspected 6th Regiment, this day, at 12 o'clock m., at Union square; the ceremony of review was very fairly performed, as a whole; the marching of the men, while passing in review, was very good; the distance and alignments well preserved, and the salutes of the officers for the greater part correct.

This regiment has been laboring under many reverses, and have had up hill work, owing to their being for a long time without a Colonel to command them; now, that they have elected an energetic, well-posted, officer, there is every reason to believe that they will very soon show a marked improvement; indeed their appearance this day gives conclusive evidence that Colonel Steinway has assumed his duties with an energy and determination which will very soon show good results.

I am very glad to be able to bear testimony to the very decided improvement in the general appearance of this regiment, since I reviewed them two years ago. The regiment paraded fairly, in point of numbers, and looked well. A good state of discipline exists, and I believe the new Colonel will be ably sustained by his officers, in his efforts to build up the regiment.

Major Godfrey, Brigade-Inspector, mustered each of the regiments of this brigade in a prompt and careful manner. Brigadier-General Burger, and staff, attended the inspection of each regiment fully uniformed.

THIRD BRIGADE—INFANTRY.

October 5th—Inspected 1st Regiment, Infantry, on Tompkins square, at 2½ P. M. This regiment shows a decided falling off, in point of numbers and in discipline, and the appearance of the men in very many instances reflects very severely upon the officers. The men are not fully equipped in some cases, and, for the most part, are careless in regard to their appearance, while the great lack of discipline existing, shows conclusively that the officers take but little interest in the discharge of their duties. In one case, a Captain complained that most of his men had chosen this day for a target excursion, and would on no account postpone their shoot, even for the annual inspection; this state of affairs should not exist, and shows a lack of interest on the part of the men, as well as a lack of command on the part of the officers, which, in my opinion, should call down the severest penalties of the law upon the offenders.

After the inspection I reviewed the regiment. This ceremony was so miserably conducted, that, had it not been so disgraceful, would have merged into a farce. At the commencement of the review, after the presenting of the salute, and while the reviewing officer was upon his way to the right, the Colonel broke into column. In passing in review the marching was good, but the distances were poorly observed, the officers, with few exceptions, not saluting properly. The review (if it can be so called) was closed by the Colonel opening ranks, facing about, and himself presenting, while his regiment stood at shoulder arms.

From the general appearance of the regiment, I am of opinion that the Colonel has lost all interest in its advancement and welfare; I am sure that the regiment has not advanced either in appearance or discipline since I reviewed and inspected it two years ago, and I do not think the State receives its just amount of duty from this command; neither am I of opinion, that, under its present organization, it is at all likely to do so.

In view of these facts I would respectfully recommend that this regiment be disbanded, and mustered out of the service.

October 6th.—Reviewed and inspected 7th Regiment on Tompkins square at 2½ this P. M. The ceremony of review was well executed in every particular. The men were steady, and marched well; in the passing review the officers, with one exception, saluting properly, and the alignments and distances well observed, in wheeling from column into line; in the closing review, some distance was left in the left wing. This is a fault which almost always occurs in a review, and is one which commandants of regiments should give more attention to; it is preferable at all times, especially so in a review, that too little distance should be taken rather than too much. The regiment is in good state of discipline, and fully armed and equipped. The officers are zealous in the discharge of their duties, prompt and efficient.

The count present shows a falling off in point of numbers as compared with last year of only ten men; this is a fact worthy of mention, as the regiment has lately adopted a full dress uniform, which naturally adds to the cost of membership, and in these times of slow enlistments every like cause militates seriously against recruiting. In a word, I can say that this regiment is so completely organized, officered, armed and equipped, as to be ready at all times to discharge any duty the State may call upon it to perform.

October 7th—Reviewed and inspected 8th Regiment this day at 2½ P. M., on Tompkins square. The review was well performed in most particulars; in the standing review the men were steady and well aligned; in the march the distance was well observed; the officers, with only one exception, saluted properly. In wheeling from column into line the fault of too much distance was noticeable in this regiment as in the former; but in this case the fault was confined to the two or three left companies. This regiment made a fine appearance, and shows a good state of discipline. They are well armed and equipped, with the exception of knapsacks. So good a regiment as this should not want for anything within the power of the State to provide.

There has existed some little feeling of insubordination during the absence of the Colonel (in Europe), and upon his subsequent resignation; but now, that he is again in command, all things are harmonized, and, under the command of Colonel Carr, all dissensions and bitterness are healed, and the officers with one accord seem intent upon leaving nothing undone, which can in any manner tend to the advancement of their regiment. The strength of the regiment present is about same as last year.

October 8th—Reviewed and inspected 9th Regiment on Tompkins square, at 2½ this P. M. The ceremony of review was well executed; in the standing review the men were steady as statues, the alignments of officers and men were perfect, while the rank of file closers were as steady and attentive as the front rank. I notice this latter fact, because so few officers are careful to instruct the Sergeants in this portion of their duties, and, consequently, it is not often that the reviewing officer has the pleasure of being received in rear of a command with the respect he is entitled to. This, in the case of this regiment, was a noticeable feature. The marching review was all that could be desired; the salutes of the officers were, without an exception, good; the distance and alignments well observed, and the men careful and steady. In the closing review everything was properly executed; and, as a whole, the review of this regiment was the best of any yet witnessed by me.

The regiment has lately adopted the white belts. This is an improvement. The command in their lively uniform, and with their soldier-like bearing, attracted universal attention.

The regiment is in good state of discipline. The Colonel (whom the officers have prevailed upon to remain with them for a time longer) is a zealous, hardworking and efficient officer, and in his efforts to make his command second to none he is ably aided and sustained by his associate field, as well as his company officers.

October 9th—Inspected 37th Regiment on Tompkins square, at 2½ o'clock this P. M. This regiment has, for the past two or three years, passed through enough trouble to have entirely broken it up, and the wonder is that it exists to-day at all. Its history is so well known that it is not necessary for me to any more than allude to it here, and that only to give satisfactory reasons for not recommending its disbandment at once. This I would do, were it not for the fact that it has weathered so many and so severe troubles that, I am of opinion, it should have one more chance to regain its lost glory. Under its lately elected Colonel I have reason to believe it will soon show a decided improvement. The material of the regiment is good, and needs only good, honest, faithful and efficient officers to, within a very short time, place it in a good position. This the Colonel means to do; and he is determined while doing all in his power to accomplish the desired result, at the same time to hold every officer to a strict accountability for the faithful discharge of his duties; in this he will have the support and countenance of his superior officers.

There is still existing a spirit of insubordination in one or two of the companies, and in these cases the colonel will use the remedy in his power.

The regiment is well armed and uniformed, but, in some cases, the appearance of the men gave evidence of the sad state of affairs so lately existing.

After the inspection I reviewed the regiment; this was fairly executed; the men were not steady, nor were the distance or alignments very well observed; the salutes of the officers, with very few exceptions, were bad; very many of these officers need to be weeded out. In view of these facts, I would respectfully recommend that this regiment, for the present, be continued in the service, in order that time may be given them to retrieve their lost glory.

October 12th—Inspected 55th Regiment on Tompkins square at 2½ o'clock this P. M. This regiment shows the lack of careful instruction; the material is good, but is not well handled; many of the company officers are incapable, and altogether inefficient. There is a carelessness among the men in some of the companies, in regard to their appearance, altogether unpardonable. In the case of these companies this evil is a growing one, and the officers should at once be obliged to perform their required duties, or take the consequences of neglect of duty. It is the duty of the Colonel of the regiment to see that company officers are prompt and efficient, and that they perform the duties required of them by law; failing in this, he himself, is amenable to that offended law, and should be held responsible. In my report two years ago, I called attention to the inefficiency of some of the company officers of this regiment, and the Colonel then promised that there should be a change; whether any has been made since that time, I do not know, but I do know if any change has been made, it is certainly for the worse. All this is injustice to good officers and men, and such injustice should not be tolerated. If the Colonel has lost his interest in his regiment he should resign, and give way to those officers who are willing to assume the work as well as wear the honors.

The material of this regiment is of too good a nature to be lost to the service, and the colonel should be obliged to perform the work necessary to put his command in a creditable shape, or else retire altogether from the labors he seems to have lost all care for.

I found the regiment under command of its Lieutenant-Colonel, and with no Major. The Colonel absent from the city without the knowledge or consent of his superior officer, and all this upon the occasion of the annual inspection. This certainly shows a lack of interest as well as discipline upon the part of the Colonel; and where such a state of affairs exists with the head, what can be expected of the body of the regiment?

After inspection I reviewed the regiment; this was only fairly performed; the marching was not good, distance bad, alignments careless, and only two decent salutes from any of the officers. And I am of opinion if some change is not soon made, it will become the duty of the next inspecting officer to recommend the disbandment of this regiment. General J. M. Varian (commanding the brigade), with a portion of his staff, each day was present, and gave his aid and counsel in the several inspections. Brevet-Colonel, O. F. Wentworth, Brigade-Inspector, carefully inspected and mustered every man of the brigade.

In closing my report of the 3d Brigade, I have to thank Brigadier-General Varian and staff, and Colonel Wentworth, for courtesies extended, and aid rendered me in the discharge of my duties.

FOURTH BRIGADE—INFANTRY.

October 26th—Reviewed and inspected 4th Regiment on Tompkins square, this day, at 2½ o'clock P. M. This is another of the zouave regiments of the division. A large number of the men and many of the officers were formerly in the volunteer service in the regiment known as "Duryea's" Zouaves.

The review was not well conducted as a whole, although some of the officers saluted well and properly. The marching was only fair; and there seemed to be a carelessness on the part of officers, as well as men, which gave evidence of loss of all love for or interest in the welfare of the command. I am only more fully convinced that the zouave uniform is in no manner conducive to good order, military discipline or effectiveness in drill.

There seems to be an earnest desire on the part of many of the officers and men of this command to be consolidated with the 3d Bendix Zouaves, and I would respectfully recommend that the proper application for such consolidation should be approved at General Head-quarters. If this is not done both regiments will soon cease to exist.

October 26th—Reviewed and inspected 69th Regiment on Tompkins square, this day, at 3½ o'clock P. M. The review was well conducted, in every particular, by the Lieutenant-Colonel in command. In the opening review the men stood steady, and the ranks were well aligned; the marching was very good, a careful attention to distance observed, and the wheeling from column into line well executed, with less interval occurring than in the case of most of the regiments thus far inspected. The salutes of most of the officers were correct. The regiment is under good discipline, and is well officered, with but few exceptions. They are well uniformed, armed and equipped, with the exception of knapsacks.

The 69th Regiment has a good record, in the past, in the volunteer service as well as in the National Guard, and it gives me pleasure to be able to report a decided improvement in appearance, discipline and drill since I inspected and reviewed them two years ago, and I trust they will continue thus to improve until they shall stand well up among the best regiments in the division and the National Guard of the State.

October 27th—Reviewed and inspected 11th Regiment, this day, on Tompkins square, at 2½ o'clock P. M. The review was well conducted in every particular. Ranks well aligned, marching good, distance well preserved, and nearly every officer saluting properly. The regiment made a fine appearance, parading, as they did, only the third in point of numbers in the division, all in their new full uniform. They gave evidence, by their attention and steadiness, of a careful training by their officers in the school of the soldier and battalion. The discipline of this regiment is not surpassed by that of any other in the division; and, indeed, where everything was so well done, little is left to be said.

The Eleventh this year, as last, gave in the column of absent a much smaller number than any other regiment yet inspected. This shows the proper spirit, and sets an example which many of our first-rate regiments can well follow with credit to themselves, and which they should feel to be a duty to the State. There is small (if any) excuse for regiments parading only three-fourths and often two-thirds of their strength present. This exhibit does not show the proper spirit, and there is something wrong in their organization which should be looked after. If the men of a command cannot parade on their annual inspection day, and this, too, when it is so arranged for their convenience as to not interfere materially with their business pursuits, they had better not appear upon the rolls at all. The State cannot afford to retain the service of men whom neither love for their regiments nor a sense of duty can affect enough to stimulate them to a performance of duty. In this respect the 11th Regiment stands at the head of the division.

Colonel Lux feels a justifiable and commendable pride in the appearance, and discipline of his regiment.

October 28th—Reviewed and inspected 22d Regiment, this day, on Tompkins square, at 2½ o'clock P. M.

The command was promptly on the ground, and at the hour appointed, I proceeded to review and inspect them. The review was conducted in fine style in every particular, the ranks were correctly aligned, men steady, and officers careful in their position. The marching was good, distance carefully preserved, and the salutes of the officers correct, and in some instances graceful. This regiment passed in double time in a highly creditable manner, indeed. The only noticeable mistake was made by the Captain of the first company, allowing his company to partially turn out after the band, and in the Lieutenant-Colonel in command, closing the review without opening ranks; but as both of these officers are good and efficient in their several positions, I am sure it was owing in both cases to a momentary forgetfulness, and not to ignorance of their duties. Indeed, where everything else was so well performed, a discharge of duty impartially towards all, leads me to notice these slight mistakes.

The regiment was fully uniformed, armed and equipped, knapsacks and overcoats rolled thereon. They paraded strong in numbers, and made a fine appearance. They are in splendid state of discipline, and show careful training on the part of the officers as well as attention on the part of the men.

As a whole, there are few regiments as good, none better than the Twenty-second; and they are fully entitled to the meed of praise awarded them upon this occasion by all present.

The commanding officer has just cause for pride in his command, and I trust, that upon another inspection his company letters may be full; at present, he has only nine companies.

October 28th—Reviewed and inspected 79th Regiment this day, on Tompkins square, at 3½ p. m. The review was well conducted, alignments and distance well preserved, men steady, and officers, with one exception, saluting properly. The regiment appeared in their new uniform, and looked very well; they are not fully equipped, many of the men appearing without body belt, cartridge box, cap pouch or bayonet sheath; they are not strong in numbers, but the commanding officer of the brigade speaks well of the command, and thinks they are now in a fair way to fill their ranks. I trust his hopes may be fully realized, as this regiment did good and faithful service in the late war, and, as many of its officers, as well as men, are veterans, I hope it will continue its existence, and that, in years to come, the record of the 79th may be as bright and untarnished in the history of the National Guard, as it is in the history of the war against rebellion ; they owe much to themselves, and more to the memory of the men who so valiantly and fearlessly sacrificed their lives, that they and we might live ; I believe that the officers and men of this regiment feel this, and I think that another year will show the proofs in full ranks, and improved efficiency ; the discipline is good. Brigadier-General Aspinwall, in fatigue uniform, and his staff in full uniform, attended the inspection ceremonies of each regiment of his command. Major Skidmore, Brigade-Inspector, mustered, and carefully inspected, the several regiments in a prompt and efficient manner. Major Brown, A. A. G., gave Major Skidmore valuable assistance in the discharge of his duties.

FIRST BRIGADE—"CAVALRY."

October 14th—This was the day designated for inspection and review of the 1st Brigade of Cavalry, but the weather being stormy the order was countermanded and another day designated.

October 19th—This being the day designated for the inspection of Battalion Washington Grey Cavalry, and as the same day and hour had been designated for inspection of a regiment in 2d Division, I was not able to be present at this inspection.

October 20th—This day was designated for inspection of 1st Regiment of Cavalry, which for same reasons as stated above, I was unable to attend. Both regiments were mustered and inspected by Major ———, who was detailed to perform this duty by General Postly, Major Kent having been elected to command Washington Grey Troop.

At a later day I will inspect and review these two commands, and will embody report of same in my report of Cavalry Brigade.

October 22d—Reviewed and inspected 3d Regiment of Cavalry this day at State Arsenal, corner 35th street and 7th avenue, at 8 o'clock P. M.

The regiment paraded dismounted, and was reviewed by wing. The review was conducted in a very creditable manner. The men were steady in line and marched well ; indeed, in this particular they would have done credit to many of our infantry organizations. The salutes of the officers were correct. The men are well uniformed, and made a first-rate appearance. The officers seem to be efficient and very careful in the discharge of their duties. The men are well equipped, with exception of some companies who are very much in need of saddles and horse equipments. They paraded strong in numbers, and show a very decided improvement in drill and discipline. I am informed by the brigade commander that the men own their own horses, all, or at least, a very large proportion of them.

November 20th—Reviewed and inspected 1st Regiment of Cavalry this day at arsenal, 35th street and 7th avenue, at 8 o'clock P. M.

The regiment made a fine appearance, and went through the ceremony of review very creditably. The salutes of most of the officers were correct, while some were very careless. Of course, it is scarcely a fair thing to expect cavalry soldiers to perform the movements of infantry, as correctly and easily when dismounted, as they would their own movements if mounted; and therefore, while I am disposed to pass over with scarcely a notice, any unsteadiness of the men, while on the march, yet it is the duty of every officer, whether cavalry or infantry, to be well posted in the ceremony of review, and this, some of the officers of the First are not. The men are well uniformed, and, I think, take pride in their organization.

November 20th—Reviewed and inspected the Battalion "Washington Greys" at the arsenal this day at 9 o'clock P. M.

This is a fine organization, better known as the "Washington Grey Troop," for many years attached to the 8th Regiment; the command is now composed of three troops, are well uniformed and equipped. They own their own horses (all of them grey) as well as their own uniform, arms, and equipments.

The review was twice performed. The first time a little unsteady, but the second time very creditably.

Major Kent, late Brigade-Inspector, has lately assumed command of this battalion, and I think will make an efficient, as he certainly is, an energetic officer.

To Brigadier-General Postly, is great credit due for his energy and perseverance, in the face of almost insurmountable obstacles, in bringing this brigade up to its present standard. For many years a very decided feeling existed against cavalry regiments, but the General has succeeded to a very great extent in overcoming this feeling; and if the brigade continues to improve as it has done for two years past it will soon be acknowledged as one of the best in the division.

SECOND DIVISION — ELEVENTH BRIGADE.

October 26th — Reviewed and inspected 23d Regiment, this day, at the State arsenal, Brooklyn, at 8 o'clock P. M.

This is without exception the finest regiment in the 2d Division, in point of numbers as well as in discipline, and general appearance, and drill; indeed there are but few regiments in the 1st Division, which, taken as a whole, equal it; certainly none in either division excel it.

Brooklyn has just cause for pride in the 23d Regiment, and I feel that I am only paying a well merited compliment, to efficient and energetic officers, as well as to prompt, hard working non-commissioned officers and men.

Upon this occasion the ceremony of review (in the rooms of the arsenal), had necessarily to be somewhat curtailed; but, so much of it as was performed gave satisfactory evidence that officers and men were well instructed. The manual of arms was executed in a most creditable manner; and indeed, where everything was so near perfection, it is almost useless to particularize. The regiment appeared in full fatigue dress with knapsacks, and overcoats rolled thereon. This is the only regiment in this division which has appeared so fully armed and equipped, and they are entitled to full credit for their really fine appearance.

The discipline of the regiment is good, and the proper spirit of pride and emulation seems to exist, so essential to success.

To Colonel Ward and his officers, great credit is due for the promptness with which they have assumed their duties, and for the efficient manner in which they have discharged them.

October 27th—Reviewed and inspected 47th Regiment, this day, at the arsenal, Brooklyn, at 8 o'clock P. M. This is another of the really good regiments of this division, and reflects great credit upon its officers. Owing to the size of the room it was not possible to perform the full ceremony of review; but so much as was performed, was correct and satisfactory.

The regiment was in fatigue dress, and paraded with a fair proportion of numbers; the manual of arms was satisfactorily executed, and, under the circumstances, was creditable. The regiment has been deprived of the use of its large room for a year, and it has, therefore, had but very little opportunity for battalion drill. This is a source of great complaint and dissatisfaction to officers and men, as the former are prompt and efficient, and the latter ambitious to see their regiment fully up to the standard of drill it held under its late Colonel, now Brigadier-General Meserole. With the spirit existing, it is safe to predict a splendid future for the 47th Regiment. The discipline is good.

October 28th.—Reviewed and inspected 56th Regiment, or, properly, a squad of men, under command of a Lieutenant-Colonel, without colors, and who claimed to be the 56th Regiment. The whole ceremony, if it had not been so serious, would have been a farce. The command was marched into the room three-fourths of an hour behind time, and then in such a state of disorder that it was a disgrace to the commanding officer. I am satisfied that nothing can be made of this command; for although there are two or three companies whose officers and men seem to be anxious to perform their duty to the State, yet the organization has so long been disorganized, and under command of an officer who seems to care nothing for its success and welfare, that I am confident the task of resuscitating it would prove fruitless.

I am aware that the General of the brigade entertains some such hopes, but I cannot indorse them, as I do not think they can ever be realized. Too much time has already been lost, and it is an injustice towards good regiments, who strive to perform their duty, to longer retain this organization in the State service.

I would therefore respectfully recommend that the 56th Regiment be immediately disbanded.

October 26th.—Reviewed and inspected the howitzer battery this day, at the arsenal, Brooklyn, at 7 o'clock P. M.

This is a fine command, efficient and in perfect state of discipline. Its men are from among the best citizens of Brooklyn, and take great pride in their organization, while the officers are hard-working and capable.

SECOND DIVISION—FIFTH BRIGADE—"INFANTRY."

October 19th.—Reviewed and inspected 13th Regiment at State arsenal, Brooklyn, this day at 8 o'clock P. M.

Owing to the lack of room the full ceremony of review could not be performed; but such as could be, was performed—simply opening of ranks and standing review. The regiment paraded in full ranks, and in their new, full uniform looked well. It is a fine body of men, and from the commandant down are well officered. Their steady attention gave evidence of hard study on the part of the officers, and hard work on the part of the men, indeed, under the command of Brevet Major-General Jourdan, commanding the regiment, no slovenly or inefficient officer can hope to remain. He is determined (and in this he is nobly sustained by his associate field and company officers) to place the 13th Regiment as near perfection as it is possible to bring any National Guard organization. That he will succeed in this, judging from the material of the regiment, and the appearance of the officers, there can be no doubt; and the regiment to-day is one of which the citizens of Brooklyn may well feel proud. It is a credit to its officers and an honor to the State. The regiment is under perfect state of discipline, is well armed and equipped.

October 20th—Reviewed and inspected 14th Regiment this day at their regimental armory in Brooklyn. For the reasons stated in case of 13th Regiment, the full ceremony of review could not be performed.

The regiment did not parade with very full ranks, but seems to be composed of good material, and well officered. Very many of the officers and men are war veterans, as the empty sleeve of some gives unquestionable proof. This regiment did good service and performed deeds of valor in the late war, which fact, if no other, entitles it to much consideration. The men are uniformed in the same uniform they wore in the service, but are moving in the direction, I am informed, of a new and more full dress uniform; although not strong in numbers, they are in good state of discipline, and have a love for their regiment which should be encouraged. I think another year will show an improvement in point of numbers. They are fully uniformed, armed and equipped, save the overcoat and knapsack.

October 23d—Inspected and made an effort to review the 1st Battalion Light Artillery, this day, at the State arsenal, Brooklyn, at 8 o'clock P. M.

This organization, as it exists at present, with the exception of one battery, is a disgrace to the division to which it is attached and the State at large, as well as a very decided reflection upon the efficiency and capacity of the commanding officer of the brigade. If this officer had understood and performed his duty, he would have long since ordered the Major commanding this battalion before an examining board, and with him many of the company officers. They are wholly unqualified for the positions they hold, with the exception of the battery commanded by Captain Johnson; and it is a burning shame, reflecting severely upon those whose duty it is to instruct officers in their several duties, as well as a gross outrage upon the State, that such officers should have been so long retained in positions they are so totally unqualified to fill.

Some of the material of the command is good, while, from the ungainly movements and awkward positions of others, I am of the opinion the State can fill its uniforms to much better advantage; but all this is the fault of the officers; and if it is not possible to select good officers to command this battalion, it were best it were disbanded at once.

October 21st—Reviewed and inspected 28th Regiment, Infantry, at State arsenal, Brooklyn, this day, at 8 o'clock p. m. Owing to the smallness of the room it was only possible to perform the ceremony as far as the opening review.

This regiment paraded with full ranks, and looked well; the men are fully uniformed, armed and equipped, save knapsack and overcoat; are under good discipline, and, for the most, are well officered. Some of the officers are not efficient, and should at once make way for others who are able and willing to make themselves so.

This regiment is scattered over a very large district, about one-half residing in Brooklyn, eastern district, and the balance in western district. There is a movement on foot to make two commands from this regiment, and I am informed by the commanding officer that already there has been recruited a battalion in the eastern district which is ready to consolidate with a portion of this regiment as soon as the necessary change can be made. The battalion left in the western district can soon be filled up to its proper strength, as this command is almost wholly composed of Germans, who are unusually fond of military display, and as often good soldiers, it would not be long before two good regiments could be formed from this one. As this is the desire of the command, and I believe it perfectly possible, I would respectfully recommend that, upon the proper application, this movement meet the approval of Head-quarters.

October 26th—Inspected the 2d Regiment of Cavalry, on Clinton street, Brooklyn, this day, at 10 o'clock a. m. Some of the companies of this regiment paraded with full ranks, and made a fine appearance, while two of them should be consolidated immediately. The men are nearly all uniformed, armed and equipped. Some of them need horse equipments and overcoats. There is a lacking of uniformity in the horse equipments which should not exist. When the two companies are consolidated it would make this command only a battalion, and I respectfully submit whether it would not be better to attach them to the 1st Brigade of Cavalry, 1st Division. I am not clear in my own mind as to the possibility of this measure, but think it would be much better to thus consolidate the arms of the service, and thereby obtain a greater efficiency of drill and discipline. At any rate this command, as it exists, is altogether too small to be entitled to the name of regiment. It is true, this consolidation would entail a severe amount of duty upon the General of brigade, but the duty would be willingly performed by him, I think, in the interest of the State. This matter is worthy of consideration, at least, and I am of opinion they should either be consolidated or wholly disbanded.

BOOKS, PAPERS, ARMS AND ARMORIES, FIRST DIVISION — FIRST BRIGADE.

November 19th — At 4 o'clock this P. M. inspected the books and papers of head-quarters of this brigade.

General Ward is entitled to great credit for the full and complete set of books and papers submitted. Most complete set of brigade head-quarter books and papers in this division.

At 5 o'clock inspected the books and papers of 12th Regiment. The regimental head-quarter books are in excellent order, and complete in every respect. As the Adjutant has no assistance in the keeping of his books, he is entitled to great credit for the time and labor bestowed; and for this, Adjutant Murphy deserves especial mention.

Company A.....	Books in fair order.
“ B.....	“ good order.
“ C.....	“ excellent order and very complete.
“ D.....	“ good order.
“ E.....	“ “
“ F.....	“ “
“ G.....	“ “
“ H.....	No books submitted.
“ I.....	Books in excellent order.
“ K.....	“ fair order.

The books and papers of this regiment as a whole are the most complete, and in the best order, of any regiment in this division.

The armory is in good order and has only the fault of being too small for the regiment.

The arms are in excellent order and are properly cared for.

November 19th — At 6 o'clock this P. M. inspected the books and papers of 2d Regiment; found the regimental head-quarter books and papers in fair order only.

Company A.....	Books only in fair order.
“ B.....	“ “
“ C.....	No books submitted.
“ D.....	Books not correctly kept and not in good order.
“ E.....	“ in fair order.
“ F.....	Vacant.
“ G.....	Only descriptive book submitted; not correct.
“ H.....	Books in good order.
“ I.....	No books submitted.
“ K.....	Books only in fair order.

This regiment has an armory which should be given to some more efficient and careful regiment; although not large, yet it is much better than some of our really deserving regiments have. The armory is not in good order; indeed, it is quite the reverse. The arms are allowed to rust, and are to-day in a condition wholly unfit for service.

I made an effort to inspect the books and papers of the 71st Regiment; but, owing to some reason as yet unexplained by the Colonel commanding, I failed. In compliance with his request, I postponed the inspection for one week, and, upon the evening appointed, I visited the armory, but found no officer present to receive me, consequently I have no report to make in their case.

SECOND BRIGADE.

November 16th—At 4 o'clock this day inspected the head-quarter books and papers of this brigade, and found everything correct and complete.

November 16th—At 5 o'clock inspected head-quarter books and papers of 1st Regiment, Artillery; found them in fine order and properly kept:

Company A.....	No books submitted.
“ B.....	Books not correctly kept.
“ C.....	“ in good order.
“ D.....	“ fair “
“ F.....	“ good “
“ G.....	“ “ “
“ H.....	“ “ “
“ I.....	“ not in good order.
“ K.....	“ in “

This regiment has a good armory in the old arsenal building, corner of White and Elm streets. The arms are in good order, as a general thing, although some of them need repairs, which the regiment is not in a condition to do at their own expense. The regiment has thirteen Delafield guns in good order, and three not in good order; also, four 24-pound brass howitzers in good order, with all the limber boxes and caissons in good order; it needs new harness, in many instances, and many implements to make its armament complete.

Battery G owns its own pieces, 24-pound brass howitzers, which were presented to the battery, in 1810, by the citizens of New York. The pieces are in as good order as it is possible to keep them, owing to the dampness of the building.

November 16th—At 6 o'clock this day I inspected the armory, arms, and papers of 3d Regiment, better known as Bendix Zouaves. Found regimental head-quarter books and papers in fair order, but not as complete as they should be:

Company A .. Books in good order.

“ B .. No books submitted.

“ C .. “ “

“ D .. Descriptive book in fine order; no order book submitted.

“ G .. Books only in fair order.

“ H .. No books submitted.

“ I .. Books in good order.

“ K .. “ fair “ only.

The armory is a good one, and is in good order. The arms are Springfield; are in good order, and properly cared for.

November 16th—At 7 o'clock inspected arms and armory of 84th Regiment, and head-quarter books and papers. The books and papers of this regiment are not correctly kept, and are not as complete as required by the regulations. No company books or papers were submitted. The regiment has a good armory; quite large enough for the number of men this regiment parades and inspects. It has 650 Springfield muskets, all in good order and properly cared for.

November 16th—At 8 o'clock inspected armory, arms, books and papers of 5th Regiment. The head-quarter books and papers are correctly kept and are complete:

Company A No books submitted.

“ B Books in fine order.

“ C “ good order.

“ D No books submitted.

Company E	Books in good order.
“ F	“ fine order and very complete.
“ G	“ good order.
“ H	“ “
“ I	“ fair order only.
“ K	“ good order.

This is one of the largest regiments in the division, and its needs better and larger accommodations; the armory is in good order. It has 700 Springfield muskets, all in good order and properly cared for. This regiment paraded the greatest number of men present at inspection in the 1st Division.

November 16th—At 9 o'clock inspected armory, arms, books and papers of 6th Regiment. The head-quarter books are in fine order; no company books were submitted. This regiment has no room worthy of the name of drill-room or regimental head-quarters, while some other regiments which should cease to exist occupy good rooms. This regiment is crowded into small, uncomfortable quarters. It has 500 Enfield muskets, totally unfit for service, and which it is quite impossible to put in anything like serviceable condition. It has 300 overcoats, property of the State. Company G, of this regiment, should be disbanded at once, as no officers or men have, as yet, reported for duty. The armory is in as good order as it is possible to put such quarters.

At 9½ o'clock, inspected armory, and arms, and books of 96th Regiment. Regimental head-quarter books are in fair order. The regiment has kept no letter book and no endorsement book. This it promised to do at once:

Company A ..	Descriptive book in good order; have no other book.
“ B ..	“ “ fine “ “
“ C ..	“ not correct; “
“ D ..	“ correct; “
“ E ..	“ not correct; “
“ F ..	“ “ “
“ G ..	“ in good order.
“ H ..	“ not correct.
“ I ..	“ “
“ K ..	“ in good order.

The regiment has 555 Enfield muskets, which are totally unfit for service, and should be at once condemned as unserviceable. It has 626 non-commissioned officers and men, and is, therefore, short of arms, even such as they are. It has 644 overcoats, property of the State. The armory is in no manner adapted to the purposes of a drill-room; it is in the rear of a bar-room, upon the level of the street, quite devoid of ventilation, and not at all suitable for so large and fine a regiment. It is kept in as good order as is possible.

BOOKS, PAPERS, ARMS, AND ARMORIES—THIRD BRIGADE.

November 17th—Inspected brigade head-quarter books and papers this day at 3½ o'clock p. m.; found everything correctly kept and quite complete.

Same day inspected armory, arms, books and papers of 1st Regiment. The regimental head-quarter books are in good order and correct.

The regiment has 400 Springfield muskets, in good order and properly cared for. It has nothing from the State save arms and equipments. The armory, although small, is large enough for the regiment, and is in good order.

November 17th—At 5 o'clock this p. m. inspected arms and armory, books and papers of 7th Regiment. The regimental head-quarter books and papers are in fine order, especially so, the roster and morning report books.

Sergeant Houghton of this company deserves great credit for the manner in which he keeps his books and papers.

The regiment has 1,000 Springfield muskets, all in good order and properly cared for. The armory is large enough for the regiment, and is in good order. The uniforms are the property of the individual members. The regiment is fully uniformed, armed, and equipped with overcoats, as well as camp and garrison equipage, and is ready at all times to discharge any duty the State may demand of it.

November 17th—At 6 o'clock this p. m. visited the armory of the 8th Regiment. Found the Adjutant present, but no field officer; found only an order book which was not correctly kept; and was informed by the Adjutant no other books were kept at regimental head-quarters. No company books were submitted, and I am compelled to say that I found the executive portion of this regiment in the worst condition of any in the division. It has 566 Springfield muskets, many of which need putting in order, and none of which are as well cared for as they should be. This regiment needs a larger and better armory.

November 17th—At 7 o'clock inspected the arms and armory, books and papers, of the 9th Regiment. Regimental head-quarter books are in good order, and are correct.

The arms are Springfield muskets, and are in good order and properly cared for. The armory is large enough for the regiment, and is in the very best order.

November 17th—At 8 o'clock visited the armory of 37th Regiment; found the regimental head-quarter books and papers in fine order, and very complete. Great credit is due Adjutant Patrick for the manner in which he has brought order from the chaos, in which he found these matters.

The armory is too small, but is very neat and in good order. The regiment has 600 Springfield muskets in good order and well cared for. Company I of this regiment should be declared vacant, having neither officers nor men.

FOURTH BRIGADE—ARMS AND ARMORIES, BOOKS AND PAPERS.

November 18th—At 4 o'clock this P. M. inspected the books and papers of head-quarters of this brigade, which I found in good order; very complete and correct.

At 5 o'clock visited the armory of the 4th Regiment, found regimental head-quarter books in good order and correct.

The armory is not large enough for a full regiment, but answers very well for so small a command as is the Fourth.

The regiment has 361 Springfield muskets. Original issue was 400 ; a deficit which, it seems, cannot be accounted for by the Lieutenant-Colonel commanding. None of these are in good order. The regiment has also 348 uniforms ; original issue 600 ; a deficit not accounted for.

November 18th—At 6 o'clock p. m. visited armory of 79th Regiment. Found regimental head-quarter books not correct or in good order.

The armory is a very good one ; not quite as well adapted to the needs of the regiment as could be desired, but much better than a large majority of the armories of this division. The regiment has 622 Harper's Ferry rifles, many of which need putting in order. It has also overcoats for 400 men.

This regiment paraded on inspection with the smallest count absent of any regiment in the division.

At 8 o'clock this P. M. visited the armory of 69th Regiment. Found regimental head-quarter books only in fair order.

The armory is large enough, and in every way adapted to the wants of this regiment. It is not kept in as good order as it should be. In 1864 there were issued to the regiment 450 Springfield muskets. It has now only 300, a deficit of 150 muskets to be accounted for; it has also 325 new State uniforms. The arms are in good order, and properly cared for.

November 18th—At 9 o'clock this P. M. visited the armory of 22d Regiment. Found regimental head-quarter books in fine order, and correct in every particular.

This regiment has one of the very best armories in the division, and is in every manner adapted to the wants of the command; it is kept in fine order; it has 600 Springfield muskets just issued, which are in good order.

CAVALRY BRIGADE—BOOKS AND PAPERS.

November 19th — At 8 o'clock this P. M., inspected books of head-quarters of this brigade, which I found in good order and very complete.

At 8½, visited armory of Battalion Washington Gray Cavalry. The head-quarter books and papers of this command are in fine order and correct in every particular. Indeed, as a whole, the books of this command are the most complete, and in the finest order of the books of any command in the division.

The armory is small and not well adapted to the needs of a cavalry command, being in the third story of a building. It is kept in fine order. The arms of this command are the property of the members.

November 20th — At 9 o'clock P. M. inspected books of the 1st Regiment, Cavalry; found regimental head-quarter books correct, and in good order.

For the reasons above stated I did not visit the armory of this regiment.

BOOKS, PAPERS, ARMS, AND ARMORIES—SECOND DIVISION.

As General Crooke turned over neither his command, nor books and papers, I had none to inspect at these head-quarters.

FIFTH BRIGADE—SECOND DIVISION.

November 9th—This day was appointed for the inspection of brigade head-quarters, books and papers, at 4 o'clock P. M., but as I was detained in New York by a review of the 7th Regiment by the Adjutant-General, it was not until near 6 o'clock I arrived at brigade head-quarters. At this hour I found neither the General nor any of his staff, notwithstanding the fact that I notified him I might, and would probably be late, and received answer that his chief of staff would await my arrival; consequently I inspected no books or papers of brigade head-quarters.

November 9th—At 6 o'clock this P. M. inspected books and papers of 13th Regiment, commanded by Brevet-Major-General Jourdan. The head-quarter books and papers were in splendid order, and reflect great credit upon the Adjutant; they were correct in every detail. Most of the company books were in good order; many of them finely kept, and correct. The armory is not large enough for this regiment, and is in no manner suitable for so fine a regiment; it needs more room and much better quarters. The muskets are in good order, and are well and properly cared for.

November 9th—At 7 o'clock inspected such books and papers as I found belonging to the 14th Regiment, commanded by Brevet-Brigadier-General Fowler, at present commanding the brigade. I found no regimental head-quarter books nor papers, the present Adjutant never having received any; and, notwithstanding the fact that he has been commissioned over a year, he has not yet found it necessary to keep any. Only three companies presented books, and none of these were either correct or satisfactory in any manner. The armory is too small; arms in good order and well kept.

October 9th—28th Regiment asked for longer time to prepare the books and papers, which I granted it, until November 23d, at which time the Adjutant submitted the books of four companies, upon which I report as follows;

Company D	Books in fair order.
“ E.....	“ “
“ F.....	“ “
“ K.....	“ “

No other company books were submitted, and I am therefore not able to make any report upon them. I am also unable to make any report of the state or condition of the armory and arms, as I made no appointment to inspect them after the first order issued, and which was not complied with.

No regimental books or papers were submitted, and the Adjutant stated he had none, he having but recently been appointed and never having received any from his predecessor; he seems to be a good officer, and promises to not only at once open new books for himself, but also to see that the company officers have new books, and keep them correctly

November 9th—At 8 o'clock P. M. inspected such books and papers of 2d Cavalry as were submitted; neither regimental head-quarter books, nor company books reflected credit upon the officers, nor were they properly kept.

November 9th—At 9 o'clock P. M. inspected such books as were presented by Battalion Light Artillery. Captain Johnson's books were the only ones even creditable; the others, regimental and company, were not correct.

ELEVENTH BRIGADE—SECOND DIVISION.

November 11th—At 4 o'clock P. M. inspected the books and papers at their brigade head-quarters, and found every thing in fine order and correct; credit is due Major Irwin for his efficiency and care in the keeping of his books and head-quarter records.

November 11th—At 5 o'clock this P. M. inspected the books, papers, arms, and armory of the 23d Regiment. Regimental head-quarter books are the finest and most complete, and perfect I have ever seen, reflecting great credit upon the officer who has had charge of them. They are complete in every respect, and not only the 23d Regiment, but the National Guard of the State owe a great deal to Major Charles H. Hunter (late Adjutant) for the labor performed, and the time given in thus perfecting such a system of books, blanks, and forms. I would advise every Adjutant of the National Guard to take pattern of the 23d Regiment books.

The arms are in as good order as possible to put these pieces. This is by far too good a regiment to have such poor arms, and if the State is possessed of any good arms, they should be issued to this regiment at once. The armory is too small, and not serviceable; the regiment needs more room. Colonel Ward, and Captain of each company with 1st Sergeant, were present in fatigue uniform.

November 11—At 6 o'clock P. M. inspected such books as were submitted by the 56th Regiment. No regimental head-quarter books.

Company C.....	Books not correct.

Arms not well kept, but are good pieces; armory too good for this regiment; neither field officers nor Adjutant were present to receive the inspecting officer.

November 11th—At 7 o'clock P. M. inspected books and papers of Howitzer Battery, and found every thing in good order and correctly kept. Captain Beebe was present in fatigue dress.

November 11th—At 8 o'clock P. M. inspected books of 47th Regiment. Regimental head-quarter books and papers were in excellent order, and properly kept.

Colonel Austin and his Adjutant were present in fatigue uniform; captains of companies in citizens' dress. This regiment has a good armory, or it will be, as soon as repaired; it is large enough for the regiment and in good location. The arms are in good order and are properly cared for.

On the 28th day of October, inspected and mustered Major-General Molineux and staff of 2d Division.

On the 25th day of November I inspected staff of 1st Division.

I find the staff officers of both divisions efficient in the discharge of their respective duties, and fully uniformed.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

I have the honor to respectfully make the following recommendations:

1st. That the 1st Regiment Artillery be detached from the 2d Brigade, and ordered to report to Brigadier-General Postly, commanding cavalry brigade; or, if this is not deemed advisable, that they then be directed to report direct to division head-quarters.

2d. That the following regiments be disbanded in the 1st Division: 1st Regiment Infantry, 2d Regiment Infantry, 3d Regiment Infantry, 4th Regiment Infantry, and 84th Regiment Infantry.

The first four regiments named, for the reason of smallness of numbers, and the last named for the same reason; together with the reason that they are altogether inefficient, and show no signs of advancement, either in point of numbers, discipline or drill.

3d. That the 1st Division be reorganized, and the brigades better equalized.

4th. That the following regiments in the 2d Division be disbanded: 56th Regiment Infantry, and 2d Regiment Cavalry.

5th. That the Major commanding 1st Battalion Light Artillery be ordered before the Examining Board, as I deem him wholly inefficient to command.

CONCLUSION.

I find the 1st Division in fine state of drill and discipline (with the exceptions noted before), and ready for any duty they may be called upon to perform.

The 2d Division is at present in a state of disorganization; having no head; the best discipline does not prevail in this command.

I cannot close my report without giving some slight expression of my feelings toward you, and to thank you for the kindness I have always met at your hands. Our official intercourse is about to cease, but I trust the future will give us many opportunities in which to continue the friendships so happily formed.

I am, also, indebted to Colonel Silas W. Burt, A. I. G., for his uniform courtesy and kindness, as well as for aid and assistance he has rendered me in the discharge of my duties.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. LIEBENAU,

Commissary-General Sub. and A. A. I. G.

ON AUDITING BUREAU, COUNTY TREASURERS' ACCOUNTS, &c.

REPORT OF COLONEL S. W. BURT.

STATE OF NEW YORK, INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S OFFICE, }
NEW YORK CITY, December 31st, 1868. }

Brigadier-General S. E. MARVIN,
Adjutant-General and Acting Inspector-General, Albany.

GENERAL— I have the honor to submit the following report of the transactions of the auditing bureau during the past year.

The apparent balance to credit of the military fund on January 1st, 1868, was $76,516.67. By the supply bill, an appropriation of $69,742.93 was made for the National Guard, and by the annual appropriation bill, $150,000 became available on the 1st of October, for the ensuing year. From the total sum, should be deducted the amount of $40,064.15, the proceeds of military fines credited to the military fund in 1867, but charged back and deducted by the Comptroller in August last, upon the technical ground that the specific amount had not been stated in the act of appropriation. The sum of $256,195.45, is therefore to be accounted for. The exhibit of expenditures for year 1868, is hereby presented in the usual form, slightly modified by the consolidation of several departments on the first day of June.

The consolidation of several departments on the 1st of June last, resulted in a large saving. The expenses of the Inspector's Pay and Quartermaster's Departments, and Bureau of Military Statistics, which averaged $3,462 per month, for the first five months of the year, were reduced to less than $1,300 per month, for the last seven months.

Your economical administration of the military funds of the disbanded regiments confined the expense of disbandment to such funds and saved a large expenditure from the general military fund.

The continued cost of erecting new arsenals and armories, and repairing and preserving those already built, should receive the earnest attention of the Legislature. These new arsenals are not recommended or desired by the military authorities, but acts making appropriations for their erection are log-rolled through the Legislature. Experience clearly shows the uselessness of the present arsenals, except three or four, and the remainder should be immediately sold, or, if that be impracticable, they should be given to the several localities for specified public purposes, and the State relieved from their care and maintenance.

The decrease of departmental expenses, and more especially the large reduction of the maximum force of the National Guard from 50,000 to 30,000 men, would indicate a corresponding reduction in the annual military expenditure or the alternative increase of means for the benefit of the smaller force. In the latter case at least twice the sum per man will be available, and if the issue of uniforms by the State be discontinued, as experience plainly dictates, an opportunity is finally afforded for those encampments for which the National Guard have so anxiously waited, and which it has so long been the earnest endeavor of the military authorities to compass.

The cost of an encampment of a regiment of 600 men, inclusive of all officers, for six days, is estimated as follows:

Pay of officers and men	$3,960 00
Subsistence, at 75 cents per ration.....	2,700 00
72 M cartridges for target practice.....	1,080 00
Transportation	300 00
Wear and tear of camp equipage.....	150 00
Incidental expenses	310 00
	<hr/>
	$8,500 00

At least fifteen regiments each year could be ordered into camp for six days, which would give two encampments to the whole term of service.

The ample future support of the National Guard would seem assured by the two alternative systems of enrollment and collection of military taxes which have been enacted within two years. There is, however, no certainty as to our laws; they are so continually enlarged, amended and repealed, that no interest has permanency, and the most carefully constructed system, involving public rights or security, though based upon acknowledged principles and shaped by experience, may be undermined and overthrown with less consideration than is accorded to the passage of an insignificant "local bill." It is an annually recurring fact that county boards of supervisors, discussing with calm deliberation the fundamental principles of government, recommend the abolition of the militia, and it is a matter of congratulation that they have thus far spared the judiciary and other civil institutions. The last enactment relative to enrollment and military revenue has naturally excited the critical examination and the opposition of some of these supervisory bodies, and they have assumed to request the members of the Legislature from their districts to secure the repeal of all laws relative to the National Guard. The endeavor of these officials to magnify, by their quasi-representative character, the individual right of petition is preposterous, and should have no influence upon those entrusted with the powers and responsibilities of government under the Constitution.

The law, as now in force, and which has thus been the object of animadversion, is as simple, thorough and efficient as possible; based upon the incontrovertible proposition that every able-bodied man owes military allegiance to the State, it lightens this inevitable burden by the substitution of a light commutation. The collection of this is no longer confided to the military officers, which, to many, was objectionable, but the tax is collected at the same time as other taxes and by the same officers, while the enrollment required by the act of Congress is secured without additional expense. Thus amended, the law would appear to be opposed either on account of the tax in itself or its amount; if the latter, it may be justly urged that the commutation of one of the most important obligations of citizenship by the imposition of a tax of one dollar per annum, is surely a cheap composition for such duty; so cheap, in fact, that a further reduction would be simply ridiculous; and, furthermore, the aggregate amount collected would not probably exceed the requirements of the service. If opposition be made to the tax because it is a tax, argument is unnecessary, since all sources of public revenue are equally obnoxious; and resistance to the tax in question would naturally originate with those who successfully evade taxes more difficult to assess. If our legislators approach this matter with judgments untrammelled by prior pledges or intimidation, and fully appreciate their responsibilities, the present law will remain without material change.

It is important to estimate the amount of revenue that should be collected under the provisions of law. According to the census of 1865 the number of males in this State, between the ages of 20 and 45, was 653,916, and adding two-fifths of those between the ages of 15 and 20, we would have, between the ages of 18 and 45, 722,004 males in 1865, to which add one per cent per annum for natural increase, and we have 743,664 males between the military ages in 1868. This is probably below the real number, as the males between 18 and 45 by the United States census of 1860 were 796,881, and though this census has been represented as grossly incorrect by overstatement, the enrollment of 1862, made through State agencies, gave 764,603 as of the military age, and at a time when 100,000 men from the State were in the field. It may, therefore, be considered a moderate estimate to place the present number at 750,000. By the returns thus far made the number liable to military duty averages sixty per cent of those between the specified ages or 450,000 in the whole State. As in the collection of any tax there are many who, though liable, evade payment, it is probable that the military tax, which is not assessed upon property, but is, in nature, a poll-tax, will be successfully evaded by many. If this deficiency be placed so high as $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent, there still remains a revenue of \$300,000 per annum, which is amply sufficient for the sustentation of a force of thirty thousand, including frequent encampments.

The proposition of an entire abolition of the military tax, and the substitution of annual appropriations from the general fund possesses the merit of simplicity and throwing upon property a portion of the burden in which it should share; but it also comprises a complete abandonment of the principle of military allegiance, renders necessary an expensive enrollment of the arms-bearing population, without pecuniary benefit, or the undeniable and sweeping abolition and extinguishment of the militia, and a violation of the laws of the United States and of the spirit of the Constitution. The National Guard would become a distinct and peculiar organization, without any connection with or relation to the great body of the citizens; concentrated in a few populous districts, it would become localized and lose its State character, and finally degenerate into a few exclusive organizations, with an eleemosynary existence, dependent upon successful lobbying at each session of the Legislature. How long would such an institution survive this severance from the interest and sympathy of the great mass of citizens of the State? The country districts, no longer reminded, constantly, by enrollment, of the supreme military liability of each citizen, would soon argue the uselessness of any force, and especially of one distant, strange, and only visible to them in the annual tax levy. The annual subsidies would soon cease, and the National Guard become, in reality, a local or corporate force, without any State or National significance. The present system demands a commutation for an inherent duty and service; it confers an obligation by the voluntary mitigation of what most conceive a hardship; the proceeds of such commutation the State can rightfully appropriate to any object, without question. But the support of a military force out of the usual revenues from taxation will soon become obnoxious, and it would be viewed as would the proposition to support the municipal police out of the State funds. At the base of one system is a great principle of civil government, while the other rests upon the shifting expedencies of the moment.

In making my last report concerning a department with which I have been connected for nearly eight years, and especially of this bureau of which I have had charge since its establishment, it may not be inappropriate to give the aggregate of the amounts audited since the commencement of the late war.

In lieu of making a distinct report, I beg leave to give here a brief general statement concerning the examination of the regimental fund accounts made by me, under your orders, during the past autumn. I found a great improvement since my last inspection (in 1866), and can suggest no change or addition to the regulations now in force. I would also report that I found the accounts of the several county treasurers correct and fully posted. I therefore, refrain from any detailed account of my inspection as possessing no particular interest or value.

In making this final report, upon the eve of a dissolution of our military association, I wish to earnestly return you my thanks for the official courtesy and personal kindness you have ever displayed towards me. The advance and improvement of the National Guard, during the past two years, is a sufficient witness to your noble military administration, and it is my pride that I had a share in your successful labors.

I am, General, very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

SILAS W. BURT,

Asst. Inspector-General and Acting Asst. Adjutant-General.

R E P O R T

OF COLONEL J. B. STONEHOUSE ON COUNTY TREASURERS' ACCOUNTS.

ALBANY, November 28, 1868.

Brigadier-General S. E. MARVIN,
Adjutant-General:

GENERAL—In accordance with special orders Nos. 150 and 243, current series, I have made an examination of the accounts of the treasurers of the counties of Albany, Broome, Chemung, Chenango, Clinton, Cortland, Delaware, Essex, Madison, Otsego, Rensselaer, Saratoga, Schoharie, Steuben, Tompkins, Warren and Washington, comparing them with their vouchers, and found them correct, with two exceptions. The treasurer of Schoharie county was unable to produce vouchers for three items charged against the regimental fund of the 108th Regiment; these he said had been mislaid, and asked further time to produce them. The treasurer of Saratoga county, I found, had paid $571.02 over and above the amount received by him on account of the regimental fund of the 29th regiment.

I also examined the books of the boards of audit for the several regiments in the counties above mentioned; these were generally properly and correctly kept.

I was also instructed to ascertain how far the requirements of general order No. 14, directing the return to the Commissary-General of all property belonging to the State issued to regiments recently disbanded, had been complied with.

I found that Col. Ferguson, of the 108th Regiment, had removed from the district, and that none of the property in the possession of that organization had been collected and turned in.

Col. Hubbard, of the 39th Regiment, and Col. Dunbar, of the 41st Regiment, were busily engaged in collecting the arms and other public property issued to them, with every prospect of being able to turn it all over in the course of a month.

The arms and equipments of the 100th Regiment, I learned from Col. Cormack, had all been shipped to the Commissary-General of Ordnance.

Nothing had been done towards gathering up the property of the 43d Regiment. Col. Race, on assuming command, gave no bonds for property issued to this regiment, and, having removed from the district, does not appear very anxious in regard to its return to the State.

Col. Whitford, of the Forty-second, and Col. Lansing, of the 76th Regiment, hope to be able to turn in all public property which they can collect, in the course of a few weeks.

Col. Alley, of the 106th Regiment, had collected and produced receipts from the Commissary-General for all the property for which he was responsible, with the exception of thirteen muskets and a few suits of uniform, which were very much worn, and would scarcely pay for transporting.

The officers of these regiments, with one or two exceptions, now their commands are mustered out, do not feel sufficient interest in collecting this property, necessary to a successful completion of the work; and I respectfully suggest that it would be advantageous to the State should an officer be detailed expressly for this purpose.

I am, General, very respectfully,

J. B. STONEHOUSE,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 2. }

No regular form will be prescribed for the course of instruction for the National Guard during the ensuing year, but to the commanding officers of the several divisions and brigades, will be intrusted the establishment of such a course, as shall seem to them desirable and requisite to increase the standing and efficiency of their respective commands.

A new system of tactics having been adopted, it will be incumbent upon every officer to familiarize himself with the full details prescribed therein, and carefully impart the same in its practical bearings, to his command.

The School of the Soldier should be thoroughly mastered in order that the subsequent lessons may be clearly comprehended. If the soldier is well grounded in all that appertains to the instruction of his company, but little difficulty is experienced in the further advances required of him.

The great lesson to be taught the soldier, is discipline. The success of every organization depends upon this, and without it, the command had better not exist. The time is past when the military of the State should be regarded as for purposes of show, or its gatherings the occasion of pomp and display; but it should be the aim and object of every officer to, so far as is in his power, perfect himself in every requirement essential to make the command efficient and reliable, in case of its services being required.

The Commander-in-Chief desires that every officer of the National Guard will use increased efforts to perfect the command with which he may be attached, in its organization, discipline and efficiency, so that in its bearings, it will prove an honor and pride to the State, and receive the merited approval of its citizens.

By order of the Commander-in-Chief.

S. E. MARVIN,
Adjutant-General.

GENERAL HEAD-QUARTERS—STATE OF NEW YORK, }
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, ALBANY, March 23d, 1868. }

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 6. }

At a meeting of the Board appointed in pursuance of section 91, Military Code, for the examination of such officers as might be ordered before it, held in the city of Albany, on the 25th day of February, 1868, as per General Orders No. 3, c. s., dated February 3, 1868, the following recommendations were made to the Commander-in-Chief in respect to the officers hereinafter named, and the same are hereby duly confirmed and published for the information of the National Guard.

I.

In relation to Colonel and Brevet Brigadier-General Calvin E. Pratt, 23d Regiment, National Guard, ordered before the Board at the instance of his senior officer for reported neglect of duty, it was resolved: "That in the case of Colonel Pratt this Board report to the Commander-in-Chief that they find said officer to be eminently capable for the position he holds, but that in some respects he has neglected his duty, and they believe the action already taken will prove a sufficient corrective of the evils charged."

II.

Lieutenant-Colonel George T. Steenbergh, of the 24th Regiment, National Guard, and Second Lieutenant Frederick P. Edmonds, of Battery "B," 10th Brigade, National Guard, are favorably commended by the Board and adjudged as eminently qualified for the positions they hold.

III.

The following named officers are, in the opinion of this Board, at present unfitted for the positions they hold, but in view of the extenuating circumstances presented by them, and the supposition that the present examination will prove an incentive to perfect themselves in a knowledge of their duties, it is recommended that they be allowed additional time to prepare for a final examination before the Board, viz:

First Lieutenant M. L. Hughes, 1st Battalion Light Artillery, 25th Brigade.
 First Lieutenant George Frauenberger, 1st Battalion Light Artillery, 25th Brigade.
 Second Lieutenant Charles A. Miller, 12th Regiment, National Guard.
 Captain John Ertz, Jr., 5th Regiment, National Guard.

They will, therefore, be required to present themselves for further examination at the next session of the Board, due notice of which will be given.

IV.

Lieutenant John E. Smith, Battery "B," 10th Brigade, is, in the opinion of the Board, unqualified for the office he holds, and it is recommended that he be allowed to resign within thirty days from the date of this order or be dismissed the service.

V.

The Board recommend that the commissions of the officers named below be declared vacant for their neglect to obey the orders of the Commander-in-Chief, in not appearing for examination, viz:

Lieutenant-Colonel Geo. W. Finch, 97th Regiment, National Guard.
 Captain B. B. Parker, 92d Regiment, National Guard.
 Captain Frederick Wehman, 1st Regiment of Cavalry, National Guard.
 First Lieutenant Edmund V. Parker, 104th Regiment, National Guard.
 Second Lieutenant Cyrus J. Minick, 44th Regiment, National Guard.

VI.

The following named officers will be required to report for examination at the next session of the Board, they having furnished good excuses for non-appearance at the last meeting.

First Lieutenant James M. Carmichael, 37th Regiment, National Guard.
 Second Lieutenant Frederick Breivogel, 1st Cavalry Regiment, National Guard.
 Second Lieutenant Joseph F. Swords, 9th Regiment, National Guard.
 Second Lieutenant Samuel J. Glassey, 9th Regiment, National Guard.

VII.

The above recommendations are hereby confirmed and the officers will be disposed of as herein recommended. Commanding officers of the organizations above named will cause the rosters of their respective commands to be changed to conform to this order, and will, as soon as practicable, order an election to fill the vacancies hereby created.

VIII.

The Commander-in-Chief again cautions all officers against recommending members of their commands to be ordered before the Examining Board, except for such disability as is contained in section 91, Military Code, and will only forward the name of an officer after a rigid investigation shall seem to warrant it.

Officers of the line and regimental staff will only be ordered upon the recommendation of the commanding officer of the organization. Field officers upon the recommendation of brigade commanders, and in both instances upon good reason being assigned.

Superior officers should not be governed by the demands of inferiors requesting their superiors to be ordered before the Board to test a supposed incompetency, but when such a case is presented should institute a thorough examination, and if the same proves satisfactory should make the recommendation upon their own responsibility. To insure discipline in a command it is necessary to inculcate in the inferior respect for and obedience to the superior.

By order of the Commander-in-Chief.

Adjutant-General.

The board of officers, constituted by Special Orders No. 2, series of 1867, to make an examination of breech-loading arms and report the result of said examination to these Head-quarters, having completed their labors and rendered a final report thereof, with their decision, is hereby dissolved.

The Commander-in-Chief desires to return his thanks to the members comprising the Board for the zeal, energy, and indefatigableness which have prompted them in the difficult and arduous task intrusted to them, and for the desire manifested to make their examination thorough, and for the greatest good to the interest and advancement of the militia of the State.

The examinations of the Board have been attended by the representatives of several foreign governments, who have expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the results following the same, and who have been enabled to form a more correct judgment of the science of this class of arms; and also many improvements to our own inventors, who have exhibited their skill and labor, have been suggested by the experiments made by the Board.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
 No. 11. }

In accordance with the authority prescribed by chapter 651, Laws of 1868, being an Act to amend an act entitled "An Act to provide for the enrollment of the militia, the organization and discipline of the National Guard of the State of New York, and for the public defense," the following instructions are hereby furnished, and will govern the Assessors in carrying out the provisions of said act.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ASSESSORS.

Assessors will place upon the rolls as subject to military duty, and therefore liable for the annual tax of one dollar :

- 1st. Every able-bodied male citizen, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years.
- 2d. Every able-bodied male person of foreign birth, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, who has declared on oath, his intention to become a citizen; that is, has taken out his first papers for naturalization.

EXEMPTIONS.

The following persons are however exempt from military duty, and consequently not liable for the military tax.

- 1st. All persons at the time in the military or naval service of the United States.
- 2d. All ministers of the gospel.
- 3d. All persons who have served as commissioned officers, for seven years, in the militia of this State, or any other of the United States, and have been honorably discharged from service :
- 4th. All persons who have served for seven years, as non-commissioned officers, musicians or privates, in any uniform company of the militia of this State.
- 5th. All officers and members now serving in the National Guard of this State.
- 6th. The following officers of the United States: the Vice-President, all Judicial and Executive officers, the members and officers of both Houses of Congress, all Custom House officers, clerks, and inspectors, and all post officers.
- 7th. All stage drivers employed in the conveyance of the United States mails, and all ferrymen employed at any ferry on a post route.
- 8th. All pilots and all mariners actually employed in sea service.
- 9th. All idiots, lunatics, paupers, habitual drunkards, and persons convicted of infamous crimes.
- 10th. All supernumary officers of the National Guard, who exhibit a certificate of the Adjutant-General, showing them entitled to the benefit prescribed for this class of officers. Officers not having certificates, will not be exempted.

N. B.—It will be specially noted that persons who have served in the military and naval forces of the United States, and firemen, are not now exempt; the provisions of law granting such exemption, have been recently suspended. (§ 2 of chap. 651, Laws of 1868.)

Whenever the Assessor, of his own personal knowledge, is assured that any person is exempt, for the reasons as set forth in the ten classes above given, he will not assess such persons for the military tax. But if any person claims to be exempt for any reason as set forth in any of the above classes, and the Assessor has no personal knowledge of the fact, he shall require an affidavit in form as follows :

STATE OF NEW YORK, } County of

A. B., of the town of.....County and State aforesaid, being duly sworn, declares that he is exempt from military duty, under the laws of the State of New York, for the reason that he.....

Subscribed and sworn before me, }
 this day of 186 . }

Such oath may be made before the Assessor, or any person authorized to administer oaths, and the person so swearing, shall not be assessed for the military tax. All such affidavits must be filed by the Assessor, in the office of the Town or City Clerk.
 Any person who shall swear falsely in such affidavit will be guilty of perjury.

If any claim is made for exemption upon the ground that the person is not able- bodied, the Assessors shall grant such exemption in cases only of actual personal deformity, or loss of a limb. As the military duty for which assessment is made, is in the reserve force only, and can be commuted by the payment of the sum of one dollar, no other exemptions for physical disability must be allowed, except those above mentioned.

III. The officers of the above organizations will, upon the receipt of this order, cause to be carefully packed in boxes all ordnance and ordnance stores belonging to their respective commands, and forward the same by the most accessible route as freight, directed, "Commissary-General of Ordnance, State Arsenal, corner of Seventh Avenue and 35th street, New York city," forwarding by mail an inventory of the same to said officer, and transmitting a duplicate of said inventory to these Head-quarters. The Commissary-General of Ordnance will, upon receipt of said property, furnish duplicate receipts for the same, transmitting one to the commanding officer of the organization and the other to these Head-quarters. Each package will be marked with the number of the regiment and the letter of the Company.

IV. All clothing, camp, and garrison equipage, and all other quartermaster's property, will be carefully packed in boxes under the direction of the commanding officer of the organization, and be forwarded, in the same manner as is provided for ordnance stores, to the Quartermaster-General, State Arsenal, corner of Seventh avenue and 35th street, New York city; each box being marked with the number of the Regiment and the letter of the Company.

V. All books, papers, and other documents relating to the several commands above mentioned, and all copies of Tactics and Regulations, the property of the State, will be forwarded to these head-quarters.

VI. The bonds given for the above property will be held by the State until the same is returned or properly accounted for. When all of the property in possession of the above named organizations or any of the same shall be duly accounted for, the bond held by the State will be duly cancelled, and the officers relieved from all accountability.

VII. The Commissary-General of Ordnance and the Quartermaster-General are hereby directed to use all means within their power to secure from the above named organizations the property of the State in their possession.

VIII. Regimental, Battalion and Company Officers will be held to a strict accountability for a correct return of all the property belonging to their respective commands.

IX. Commanding Officers of organizations affected by this order will, under the direction of the Commissary and Quartermaster-Generals, make out a return of the stores on hand at the time of the receipt of this order, from the date of their last annual report, and forward the same to the officers above named.

X. The Auditing Boards of the different Brigades affected by this order will proceed at once to audit all the accounts against the organizations herewith disbanded up to the receipt of this order, and forward an abstract of the same with the vouchers to these head-quarters.

Brigade Commanders will transmit at the same time an accurate statement of the amount with the County Treasurers to the credit of the regimental fund of each organization disbanded.

XI. Commanding Officers of organizations disbanded by this order will cause to be made out four copies of the Muster-out Roll of their respective commands. The rolls will embrace the names of all persons belonging to the organization, and will fully account for them. The date of enlistment will be accurately fixed. The rolls will all be given to the mustering officer, who, after certifying the same, will forward one copy to the Adjutant-General, one copy to the Commanding Officer of the Regiment, one to the Company Commander, and retain the other for himself.

XII. Brigade Inspectors are hereby constituted as Mustering Officers, but when it is impossible for said officer to discharge this duty, the commanding officer of the brigade will detail some other competent staff officer to perform the same.

XIII. Mustering officers will carefully examine the muster-out rolls and see that they may incur in collecting and forwarding the property of their respective commands, in compliance with this order. The latter payment will be a charge against the regimental fund of the organization, and will be approved by the Adjutant-General prior to payment being made. All expenses for freight will be paid by the Commissary-General of Ordnance and the Quartermaster-General, upon the receipt of the property. Mustering officers will forward their accounts, in duplicate, to this office; the same will be examined and approved by the Adjutant-General, audited by the Auditor of Military Accounts, and paid as are other military accounts.

XXI. It is desirable and earnestly urged that commanding officers proceed at once to comply with the above orders. A failure to do so will necessitate the using of such means as will secure the object desired.

XXII. The non-commissioned officers, musicians and privates of the above named organizations are returned to the reserve militia, and those not exempt by reason of having served a full term or otherwise as is provided by law, will be returned by the assessors in their report, the same as if they had not been members of the active militia.

XXIII. The commanding officers of the brigades which any of the above regiments may constitute a part, will order the regiments to assemble for muster-out at such places in their respective districts as may be most convenient, and as soon as practicable after the receipt of this order. And they will direct the Brigade Inspectors, or such other staff officers as may be detailed, to proceed to muster-out said organizations and furnish the discharges in accordance with the provisions of this order. Commandants of regiments will, upon the receipt of this order, issue the necessary instructions to the company officers to make out the muster-out rolls of their respective commands, and fill up the discharges in readiness for the signature of the mustering officer on the day the command shall assemble for muster-out.

XXIV. The Commander-in-Chief desires to express his thanks to the officers and men comprising the above mentioned organizations for their energy, fidelity and devotedness to the interests of the Military Department of the State, and for the zeal and patriotism that actuated them in enrolling themselves in their respective commands. In the disbandment of the above organizations the State is deprived of the services of many valuable soldiers who have been long connected with the National Guard, and of others who, after a faithful service in the army of the United States and an honorable discharge from the same, joined the organizations of the State, and aided, to a great extent, in increasing the morale and efficiency of the same. He indulges the hope that all will readily yield to the demands of this order, and, should the occasion ever require, will promptly gather around the standards of the National Guard to defend the honor and integrity of the State, uphold its institutions, and maintain the majesty of the law.

XXV. To fulfill the requirements of the law, it will be necessary to disband some other organizations, for which subsequent orders will be issued, and the provisions of this order are hereby established for the government of any further disbandments that may be decided upon.

By order of the Commander-in-Chief.

- 10 Companies.

In addition to the regimental non-commissioned staff above provided, it shall be optional with the Regimental Commander to appoint two Sergeant Standard-Bearers, as the same are now provided by law, but such officers cannot be mustered into the service of the United States. A regimental band, under command of a leader, may also be enlisted.

COMPANY ORGANIZATION—INFANTRY.

- 1 Captain.
- 1 First Lieutenant.
- 1 Second Lieutenant.
- 1 First Sergeant.
- 1 Quartermaster-Sergeant.
- 4 Sergeants.
- 8 Corporals.
- 2 Musicians.
- 30 to 100 Privates.

It will be optional with company commandants to enroll one musician in addition to the two above stated, as the military code provides for three in each company, but only two can be mustered into the United States service; also, in case of muster into the United States service, there will be allowed to each company two artificers and one wagoner.

II. No officers in excess of those designated in these orders can be recognized.

III. The enlistment of all members of the National Guard, as provided by General Orders No. 23, of 1867, is strictly enjoined. Minors must not be enlisted except with consent of parents or guardians. The enlistment of aliens is prohibited. Foreigners who have declared on oath their intention to become citizens, may be enrolled.

IV. The attention of all officers and members of the National Guard is directed to the provisions of law that the term of service shall be seven years, and that discharges can be granted only for physical disability or expiration of term of service. Surgeons will give certificates of disability only in cases where the causes are permanent, and disqualifying for active service.

V. The payment of fines or penalties for absence from company meetings, drills, parades and other assemblages, cannot in any sense be considered as a commutation for the actual service required of the officers and members of the National Guard. Whenever an officer or member shall have been absent from three consecutive meetings, drills or parades, without rendering a satisfactory excuse for such absence, either on account of illness of self or members of his family, or unavoidable absence from home, in addition to all fines and penalties imposed for such absence, the time from the date of the first absence to the date when the delinquent shall again report for duty at a company meeting or drill, shall not be allowed upon his term of enlistment; and the commandant of the company shall upon the descriptive books charge such time, giving dates against such member, who will not be entitled to a discharge for expiration of term of service, until he shall have made good the time so lost and deducted, and shall have actually served the full term required by law.

VI. Delinquent members will be dropped from the rolls in manner as follows:

Whenever a member of any company shall have moved beyond the bounds of the State, or having been absent without leave and returned to and fined by sentence of court martial, and such sentence cannot be enforced on account of inability to find such member, and such sentence having been promulgated at least three months prior to the annual inspection and muster, then the names of such persons shall not be borne in place upon the first muster roll succeeding such absence or sentence of court martial; but such names shall be entered after the alphabetical list of privates, and opposite their names in the column of remarks shall be entered: "Dropped [May 30], removed from State," or "dropped [February 9], cannot be found," as the case may be, and the date entered being that when the person last reported for duty. But no member shall be so dropped except with the approval of the commandant of the regiment, to whom the company commandants shall, at least three weeks before the annual muster, report the names of persons liable to be dropped and the causes therefor, which report shall be returned with approval or disapproval within ten days after receipt.

VII. Members so dropped from the rolls shall not be included in the aggregate strength of the company or regiment as "absent," or aggregate, "present and absent." On muster rolls succeeding the first roll after such persons are dropped, their names shall not appear at all, except by order of the commandant of the regiment upon evidence that such members have voluntarily returned to duty and paid all fines and penalties due, or have been arrested and the sentence of court martial enforced, and in such case their names shall be entered in place on the next rolls thereafter, and opposite them in the column of remarks shall be entered, "dropped [May 30, 1867], taken up [April 11, 1868]." And similar entries shall be made on the company descriptive books at the time the order of the commandant of the regiment directing the dropping or taking up is received. Members when dropped shall be estimated as a "loss," and when taken up, as a "gain."

VIII. In addition to all fines and penalties imposed for absence, the term during which a person shall have been dropped from the rolls, shall not be allowed upon his term of enlistment, but he shall serve such additional time as may be equal to the entire term during which he was dropped, in order to fulfill the conditions of his enlistment.

IX. Members whose names are dropped from the rolls shall not be included in any company or regimental report or return of the strength of such company or regiment, but shall be separately reported as "dropped." Their names shall be continued on the descriptive books, with appropriate remarks, and they shall be considered as members of the National Guard to all intents and purposes as provided by law, and subject to all legal liabilities as such. The process of dropping from the rolls is not in any sense a discharge, nor does it afford any relief from service or condonation of offences, but is to be considered simply as a purgation of the rolls by the temporary omission of recreant members, in order to avoid a fallacious exhibit of the available strength of the command.

X. Commandants of regiments will be held responsible for the proper discharge of their duties, in approving the expulsion of members under section 161 of the Military Code. Such expulsion should only be approved when founded upon general bad character, unfitting the possessor for association with gentlemen, or base misconduct, and in the latter case only when the offense cannot be punished by action of a court-martial. In all cases the cause for expulsion shall be fully given by the commandant of the regiment in the general orders approving such expulsion, and copies of all such orders shall be transmitted to the Adjutant-General.

XI. Transfers of members from one company to another in the same regiment must be approved by the commandants of each company and by the commandant of the regiment. If the transfer be from regiment to regiment in the same brigade, the further approval of the commandant of the brigade will be required. If the transfer be made from brigade to brigade in the same division, or from division to division, the additional approval of the commandant of the division will be required.

XII. In the transfer of men, the commandant of the company from which transferred shall furnish to the commandant of the company to which transferred a descriptive roll of the man or men transferred, which shall set forth the date of enlistment, and place where and by whom; the date of muster into service, and place where and by whom mustered; the number of days lost by reason of being dropped from the rolls or for inexcusable absence, and such other records as may have been entered upon the descriptive books, and which abstract shall be entered upon the descriptive books of the company to which such man or men may be transferred.

XIII. Persons who have served the full term of enlistment, but voluntarily remain in service, are, when attentive and efficient, deserving of high regard for their unselfish devotion to the public interests; but when negligent and insubordinate, their example becomes doubly pernicious in its effects upon younger members, and they may be summarily discharged by the issue of a certificate of discharge for expiration of term of service by the commandant of the regiment, and without application on their part, and which dismissal shall be published in regimental general orders.

XIV. Vacancies in the positions of non-commissioned officers of companies shall occur only upon the expiration of term of service of the incumbent, his death or discharge for physical disability, his promotion, or reduction to the ranks by the order of the commanding officer of the regiment, or by sentence of court-martial; and any company by-law, limiting the tenure of office by non-commissioned officers, shall be void.

XV. The field officers of each regiment shall constitute a board which may examine into and decide upon the qualifications of any person holding or elected to position as a company non-commissioned officer, and if the decision of such board shall be adverse, the commanding officer of the regiment shall revoke or refuse to issue a warrant to such person, and an election shall be ordered to fill the vacancy.

XVI. The "first sergeant" of each company is the proper title of the orderly sergeant, who may be appointed to the duty by the captain, from any of the sergeants in the company.

XVII. Company quartermaster-sergeants will be appointed from each company, by the commandant of the regiment, upon the recommendation of the company commandant. They shall have charge of all property in the possession of the company not issued to the members, and shall keep an accurate account of all property whether issued to members or in store, and shall make such reports to the regimental quartermaster as he may require. They will sustain the same relations to companies as the regimental quartermaster-sergeant to the regiment, and to whom they will be subordinate. They will be under the orders of the company commandant in regard to all property in possession of the company or its members, and subject to the same provisions of law and regulations as the other sergeants. When necessary they will also act as company commissary-sergeants.

XVIII. The following modifications and additions to the regulations regarding the chevrons of non-commissioned officers, are hereby made:

For a Regimental Quartermaster-sergeant—Three bars and a tie of three bars in silk.

For a Company Quartermaster-Sergeant—Three bars and a tie of one bar in worsted.

For a Hospital Steward—A half chevron of the following description, viz: Of emerald green cloth, one and three-fourths inches wide, running obliquely downward from the outer to the inner seam of the sleeve, and at an angle of about thirty degrees with a horizontal, parallel to, and one-eighth of an inch from both the upper and lower edge, an embroidery of yellow silk one-eighth of an inch wide, and in the center a "caduceus" two inches long, embroidered also with yellow silk, the head toward the outer seam of the sleeve.

By order of the Commander-in-Chief.

Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 21. }

The following regulations and instructions for making muster rolls for musters and inspections, for discharges from service, and for keeping regimental and company records, are published for the government of all concerned:

ANNUAL MUSTER AND INSPECTION.

I. The muster rolls of companies will be prepared by the commandants of companies, who will be responsible for the accuracy of such rolls when delivered to the mustering officer. The muster rolls of the regimental officers (field and staff and regimental band) will be prepared by the regimental adjutant, who will be responsible for their accuracy. In the following instructions, words placed in brackets, thus "[———]," are inserted simply for illustration.

CAPTION OF ROLLS.

II. The caption of rolls will embrace the name of the captain or permanent commander, and letter of the company; the number of the regiment; the name of colonel or permanent commanding officer; and the date and place of muster and name of the mustering officer.

NUMBER OF ROLLS.

III. There will be four copies of the muster rolls prepared: One for the captain of the company, one for the colonel of the regiment, one to be retained by the mustering officer, and one to be transmitted by the latter to the Adjutant-General.

FILLING UP ROLLS.

IV. In making muster rolls, where the number of lines will admit, give two lines to each commissioned officer, to afford room for necessary remarks; and leave a blank line between lieutenant and sergeant, between sergeant and corporal, and so of the grades below.

V. Number (in the marginal column only) captain, 1; the first lieutenant, 1; the second lieutenant, 1; first sergeant, 1; quartermaster sergeant, 1; sergeants, 1, 2, 3, 4; corporals, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8; musicians, 1, 2; privates, 1, 2, 3, and so on, or according to the numbers in each grade embraced on the roll—every grade, on any roll, will commence with No. 1, and the recapitulation will then show a corresponding number of each grade.

VI. The christian name, or the first one, as “John B. Smith,” must in all cases be written at full length—not the first letter of it; and the names of every grade must exactly correspond, by numbers, on the rolls made for any muster.

VII. The rolls must embrace the name of every person who was an active member at the date of the last muster, and the names of all who have joined since by enrollment, draft, transfer or taken up (having been previously dropped).

VIII. The names of officers resigned, discharged, transferred, promoted or died will be inserted in the next muster roll thereafter, among the commissioned officers (not at the bottom of the roll), with appropriate remarks.

IX. No officers, commissioned or non-commissioned, will be mustered, either in grade or excess of numbers, except those recognized by general orders. No private, musician or non-commissioned officer will be mustered, unless he shall have been regularly enlisted as provided by G. O. No. 23, series of 1867.

X. The rolls of field and staff will embrace the field officers, the regimental adjutant, quartermaster, commissary of subsistence, medical officers and chaplain, the authorized non-commissioned staff, and the regimental band and leader, when the same have been regularly enlisted. The right and left general guides are not included in the non-commissioned staff, and their names, and that of other detailed men, will not be entered on the field and staff rolls, but on the rolls of their respective companies.

CHANGES OF GRADE, PROMOTIONS, REDUCTIONS.

XI. The names of all persons must be among those of the grade (according to relative rank, or if privates, alphabetically), to which they belong at the time of the muster to be made. If a person has been appointed or promoted within the period embraced, say in the column of remarks: “Appointed (or elected or promoted, as the case may be), from [private, July 28];” and if he came from another company, say: “Appointed (or elected, &c.) from [sergeant in C] company [July 28] and joined by transfer.” If reduced within the time as above, say: “Reduced from [sergeant, July 28] by sentence of court-martial,” or “Reduced from [sergeant, July 28] by order of Colonel [Jones],” as the case may be.

XII. If one person has been appointed, elected or promoted in place of another, say (following the date as above) “vice [Briggs] resigned, (deceased, discharged, transferred, promoted or reduced),” as the case may be.

XIII. Officers or men detached for special duty will be borne on the rolls of their companies, as of their actual grade, and opposite their names in the column of remarks will be entered, "Detached as [right general guide]," or as the case may be.

ALTERATIONS SINCE LAST MUSTER—GAIN BY RECRUITS, &c.

XIV. When officers or men join the company by enlistment or transfer, or taken up (after being dropped), their names will be entered on the ensuing muster roll in their appropriate places, alphabetically, if privates, with the when, where and by whom enrolled, in the respective columns; in the column of remarks say: "Joined a recruit [February 10]," or "Joined by transfer from company [B], [February 10], order of Colonel [Jones]," or "Taken up [March 20], having been dropped [June 15, 1867]."

ALTERATIONS SINCE LAST MUSTER—LOSS BY DIED, DISCHARGED, DROPPED, &c.

XV. If any men (not commissioned officers) have died, been dropped, expelled, discharged, transferred or promoted out of the company, during the time for which the muster is made, their names will be omitted from where they previously stood, and placed at the bottom of the rolls, in the order as above, with a blank line between the last private, (in alphabetical list) and the names of those "died, &c.;" and also a blank line between each of the classes; which words "died," "dropped," "expelled," &c., will be written in the blank line (in the column of names) above each of the lists of names, "died," &c.; or if there be not room in the roll for such blank lines, then the words may be written in the left hand marginal column, perpendicularly on the left of the numbers or figures in each list. The names of commissioned officers who have gone out of service, or been promoted out of the company, will stand in their appropriate places on the next muster roll thereafter, followed by the name of the one, if any, appointed or elected to replace them. In the column of "Remarks by the Commandant of the company," opposite the names of officers and men of this description, say "Resigned [April 21]," or "Promoted to [Major, January 10]," or "Dropped, cannot be found [March 6]," or "Discharged for physical disability (or expiration of term of service), [May 19]," or "Expelled, order of Colonel [Jones, February 3]," or "Appointed [Sergeant-Major, June 15]," as the several cases may be. In all cases the dates of original enrollment and muster must be entered in the appropriate columns, and great care should be taken to give correct dates of all casualties.

FILLING UP THE COLUMNS.

XVI. Under the head of "Rank" will be entered the rank at present muster. The "Age" will represent on all rolls the age at date of enrollment as given in next column. Under the head "Enrolled" will be given the date of original entry into service, such service being continuous in the same organization to date, or by transfer from some other organization, in which latter case give date of enlistment in previous organization in all rolls subsequent to transfer, and on the next roll after transfer enter in the column of remarks "transferred from Company [A] of the [4th] Regiment [February 16]." If a portion of the term has been served in some other organization disbanded, the date should give enrollment into present company, and in the remarks should be entered, "served in [52d] Regiment, N. G., [3] years [5] months and [14] days, disbanded." The enlistment papers will hereafter accurately fix the date of enrollment. The date of "muster into service" will be construed as the first inspection by the brigade inspector, at which the person was present, unless he was formally mustered at an earlier date which should then be given. Under the several heads "Armed," "Equipped" and "Uniformed," will be entered opposite each name the words "yes" or "no," as may be appropriate. In the record of "service performed," every evening devoted to drill or instruction will be counted as one day; also each day of parade, either company or regimental, will be counted as a day of drill. The columns headed "at this annual muster," will not be filled by the captain, but reserved for the inspector.

STOPPAGES.

XVII. For any arms, equipments, clothing or other property issued by the State, lost, destroyed or injured through negligence or other causes by any member, there will be entered opposite his name, the amount charged and collected for the same, and if the same has not yet been paid at the time of muster, it should be so entered on the roll, thus: "Lost [bayonet] stopped [$2.25] unpaid." For all losses and damages to public property, not charged against the offending person on the rolls, the commandant of the company will be held responsible.

RECAPITULATION.

XVIII. The columns under the above heading to be filled up by the inspector and company commandant respectively, are designated on the rolls, and should be correctly abstracted from the details in the body of the roll.

PROPERTY RETURNS.

XIX. It is important that these returns should be complete and correct, and the several totals carried out. Any articles not named in the returns can be entered in the blank spaces left at the foot of each return. In their preparation the commandant will be assisted by the company quartermaster-sergeant, whose records should be full and accurate. They should include all military property in possession of the company or its members.

QUERIES—ANNUAL RECORD.

XX. These require no special examination as their purpose is sufficiently manifest.

GENERAL DUTIES OF COMMANDANTS OF COMPANIES.

XXI. Company commandants will be held responsible for the accuracy of the rolls as records, also for prompt report to the commandant of regiment of members liable to be dropped from the rolls. The rolls should be legibly filled up, without blots or erasures, and all the entries opposite each name should be independent and not filled by "ditto," "do" or their equivalents. Ignorance of duty or negligence in making records, reports and rolls will be considered as evidences of inefficiency, and the delinquent officer will be ordered before an examining board or court-martial as the case may require. These points are also applicable to the regimental adjutant in the preparation of the rolls of field and staff. The rolls must be sent to the mustering officer one week before the day of muster.

GENERAL DUTIES OF COMMANDANTS OF REGIMENTS.

XXII. The commandants of regiments are responsible for the general promptitude and accuracy of their subordinates in the preparation of rolls. If the company officers are instructed in their duties, their descriptive books and records frequently inspected and a thorough system of accountability enforced, all reports and rolls can be readily and correctly prepared. Regimental commandants should therefore advise (in person or through their field and staff officers) the company officers in the preparation of rolls, and examine them before they are returned. Lack of interest in these matters, which are so vital to the efficiency of a regiment, is more reprehensible and injurious than ignorance. Special attention should be given to the prompt dropping from the rolls of all delinquent members as provided by G. O. No. 18, current series. The regimental commandant is required to approve such action by the company commandant in order to prevent abuses, but the former officer has no option but to approve the action of the latter if made in accordance with the provisions of the above named orders. Should company commandants neglect to report delinquents liable to be dropped, the regimental commandant should order such reports to be made; and in case of similar neglect to charge members for loss of time by inexcusable absences (§ 5, G. O. No. 18, c. s.), he should order such charge to be made.

GENERAL DUTIES OF MUSTERING AND INSPECTING OFFICERS.

XXIII. The annual muster and inspection of the National Guard furnish the information and statistics upon which the entire military administration is based. The accuracy of the rolls and the thorough performance of the duties of inspection and muster are thus most important, and the officers upon whom these duties devolve will therefore be held strictly responsible for their proper discharge. The penalties for refusal to discharge these important duties, or negligence in their performance, will be forfeiture of pay and such other penalties as are provided by law. Special attention is directed to the following points:

1. The annual inspection and muster will be made by the Brigade Inspectors, or in case of their absence or inability from any cause, by an officer detailed for special duty by the commandant of the brigade.
2. The date of the inspection and muster of the several organizations in each brigade, will be fixed by general orders from brigade headquarters.
3. The muster rolls will be delivered by the commandants of companies to the inspector one week before the day of inspection, in order that he may examine the rolls, and if deficient or incorrect in any respect, return them for correction. In such examinations he will be guided by the provisions of these orders and such others as may be issued from general headquarters, and orders from brigade headquarters not in conflict with the former.
4. The inspection and muster of the troops will be made in accordance with Articles 19 and 20 of the General Regulations, and such orders and instructions as may be issued from general headquarters and from brigade headquarters not in conflict therewith.
5. In cases of suspected fraud by the substitution of men, or designedly incorrect entries on the rolls, or misrepresentations in regard to property, the inspector will immediately report the matter to the commandant of the brigade.
6. In addition to the inspection of the troops, the inspector will carefully inspect the armories, company and regimental books, and the condition of the arms and other public property not exhibited with the troops at time of muster, and make return thereof on the rolls of the several companies, or by special report, if deemed advisable.
7. The inspector will make his entries upon all of the four copies of the rolls, and certify each of them.

8. Muster rolls and inspection returns must be transmitted to the Adjutant-General's office, Albany, on or before the tenth (10th) day of November.

DUTIES OF COMMANDANTS OF BRIGADES.

XXIV. By frequent inspections and the requirement of consolidated returns of parades, &c., the commandants of brigades should keep themselves constantly acquainted with the condition of every organization in their commands, and encourage the efforts of their subordinates by enforcing discipline. They should see that enlistments are properly made; that all delinquents are reported for court-martial; that the courts are held and their sentences enforced; that absentees without leave are dropped from the rolls, as provided by regulation; and generally, that all the military obligations legally assumed by the officers and men under their command are properly fulfilled. In regard to the annual inspection and muster, attention is directed to the following:

1. Commandants of brigades will publish general orders designating the days of inspection of the several organizations in their commands, which orders shall be promulgated at least twenty days before such inspection.

2. In case of the absence or inability of the brigade inspector to make the inspection and muster, the brigade commander will detail for the special duty some other officer of his staff, who will be, for such purpose, invested with the same powers and subject to the same liabilities as the brigade inspector.

3. The brigade commander may, by orders, direct such additional and specific inspections as he may deem advisable, and as may not be in conflict with regulations and orders from general headquarters.

4. In case of the report, by the inspector, of suspected fraud or misrepresentation in the muster rolls or otherwise by the commandant of a company, the brigade commander may, upon examination, order the correction of the rolls, or may place the offending officer under arrest, and direct the next senior officer to return amended rolls.

5. Commandants of brigades should be present at the muster and inspection of each of the organizations in their respective commands, and should see that the regulations and orders in regard to the same are strictly enforced.

MUSTERS IN AND OUT OF ACTIVE SERVICE.

XXV. Whenever any organization of the National Guard is ordered upon any duty which will entitle the members to payment for services, it will be mustered into and out of service on regular rolls.

MUSTER-IN ROLLS.

XXVI. The muster-in rolls shall state the term of service for which mustered and the orders by which called into service. If, from the nature of the service, the exact term cannot be fixed, state the longest probable term, and add "unless sooner discharged." If called suddenly into service by either military or civil authority in such pressing emergency as to prevent preliminary muster, it will be made so soon as circumstances will allow, and dated as of the day of entry into service.

MUSTER-OUT ROLLS.

XXVII. Muster-out rolls will be dated upon the day of discharge from service, but troops can be so discharged and mustered out only in their regimental districts, except that regiments whose districts form part of any incorporated city, may be mustered out at any place within the limits of such city.

XXVIII. The date when each officer and member actually commenced active duty under the orders, will be entered opposite their several names in the column headed "Enrolled." And any changes in rank, affecting pay, which may have occurred since ordered into service, will be carefully entered in the column of remarks, as also the dates of death, discharge or desertion.

XXIX. Great care should be taken to ensure accountability for all public property issued; and stoppages must be made for articles lost or destroyed, wantonly or through neglect, otherwise the commanding officers will be charged with the same.

XXX. The loss of private arms, equipments, or other authorized military property should be stated when the loss was unavoidable and from no fault or carelessness on the part of the owner; name the article, its cost, manner, place and time of loss.

XXXI. If subsistence has not been furnished, but the troops have supplied it at their own expense, such fact will be noted, as also if subsistence has been so supplied for any portion of the time, giving dates.

XXXII. Four copies of muster-in and muster-out rolls will be made; one to be retained by mustering officer, one transmitted to the Adjutant-General, one to the Paymaster-General, and one retained by the commandant of company.

XXXIII. Arms, equipments, camp equipage, &c., which are furnished for public use during the term of duty or encampment, must be re-delivered, within fifteen days after the termination of service, to the proper officers and receipts taken therefor. If lost or damaged, they must be accounted for by the decision of a board of survey, legally convened, and approved by the Adjutant-General, as having been lost or worn out, while in public use, by unavoidable accident, without any fault or negligence by him who had the property in charge. All deficiencies will be charged to the individual who had the property in use. Captains and other officers are responsible for the public property, such as arms, equipments, camp equipage, &c., issued to and in use by their men, to see that the articles are well preserved and returned or accounted for as above.

DISBANDMENT.

XXXIV. The discharge from service of troops by disbandment of organizations, will be made in accordance with the provisions of General Orders, No. 14, current series.

REGIMENTAL AND COMPANY RECORDS.

XXXV. The most important record is the Company Descriptive Book, which is the original registry of the military history of the members, and should contain all information affecting their military relations and liabilities. At least six lines should be allowed to each name, to afford space for appropriate remarks from time to time; this would give room for four hundred names in the books as issued.

XXXVI. In the descriptive books should be entered all information required in making up muster rolls, as set forth in the preceding instructions. Special attention should be paid to the accurate entries of dates, when members are promoted or reduced, discharged, dropped from the rolls and taken up again, and loss of time by inexcusable absence; also, all charges for loss of arms and other public property, and injury thereto through negligence or malice.

XXXVII. By keeping the books constantly posted to date, accuracy is ensured and the labor rendered insignificant and free from the vexations and errors that occur when the records are in arrears. Commanding officers should attend to this matter personally and not depend upon subordinates.

XXXVIII. The above instructions and remarks are also applicable to the Roster of officers or Regimental Descriptive Book kept by the regimental adjutant.

XXXIX. Company quartermaster-sergeants will, under the direction of the company commandant, keep a full and correct record of all military property in the possession of the company or its members.

By order of the Commander-in-Chief.

Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR.

GENERAL HEAD-QUARTERS—STATE OF NEW YORK, }
 ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, ALBANY, June 5, 1868. }

To

The members of the National Guard disbanded by General Orders No. 14, dated June 5th, 1868.

In disbanding organizations of the National Guard, in compliance with the law enacted by the recent Legislature, the Commander-in-Chief desires to convey to the members of such companies and regiments, his hearty thanks for the services rendered by them. The military service—the most important duty of citizenship, and frequently the most onerous, is now after its salvation of our country, acknowledged by all to be honorable and praiseworthy, but its duties have been too often considered as burdensome and oppressive.

You voluntarily assumed these duties, undoubtedly at great personal sacrifice, and have labored to perfect yourselves in military attainments. If your active services as soldiers have not been required you have ever been prepared for the necessity. Your fellow citizens are largely indebted to you for your unselfish labors and for the voluntary assumption of their share of the burden which in one sense rests equally on all. The gradual restoration of public order, and the peaceful aspect of foreign relations, has rendered expedient a reduction of the military establishment of the State, to such force as would be easily and ungrudgingly sustained. In making such reduction, the public interest has been alone consulted, without intention of undue prejudice or favoritism in any direction. It has become necessary under the provisions of law to discharge about twenty thousand (20,000) National Guardsmen, and in making the arrangements therefor, it has been attempted to retain those organizations that by their location could best fulfill the demands of the entire State, for an efficient military force. In a dense population, as in cities and large towns, the performance of military duty is rendered easy by the opportunities for frequent assemblage for evening drills, and for battalion instruction and drill. In a sparse population such opportunities are very unfrequent, and obtained only by a great sacrifice of time by those who are too often unprepared to sustain the expenditure. In great centers of population, the military force is also more frequently required for the sustentation of the laws and public order, while it is quickly assembled and readily transported to the most distant points when required by the public safety.

The military education you have received has better fitted you, by its discipline and subordination for the peaceful duties of citizenship, and in the deplorable alternative of war, you will be better prepared for that service to your country which you will freely offer.

Though your association with the active militia is dissolved, your military relations to the State are continued, as you return to that reserve force which comprises the great mass of your fellow-citizens. You will thus have an opportunity, through your intelligent understanding of the purposes and importance of the National Guard, to correct erroneous impressions, remove prejudices, and vindicate the character of the organization with which you have been honorably connected. Provision has been made for credit, for your past service, should you again enroll yourselves in the National Guard.

I again, in the name of the Commander-in-Chief, thank you for your past services, which in themselves are assurances that in all the duties of citizenship you will be found prompt and efficient.

Very respectfully,

S. E. MARVIN,

Adjutant-General
