

NYG HISTORY, UNITS and COMMANDERS – By MICHAEL J. STENZEL

WORLD WAR I

The National Defense Act of 1916 provided cursory authority to organize “State” forces as the last sentence of Section 61 stated, “that nothing contained in this act shall prevent the organization and maintenance of state police or Constabulary.” Governors used this clause as permission to begin preparations for organizing replacement National Guard units. On 3 August 1917, the Adjutant General of New York, in order to comply with the provisions of the State Constitution requiring that troops be available to the Governor for the protection of life and property of the citizens of New York, organized a State Military Force known as the New York Guard under the Home Guard Act of 1917, and the subsequent War Department Circular #3 of March 1918. Re-organized on geographical lines under GO# 58 AGO November 1917.

STATE ACTIVE DUTY -

In accordance with Special Orders No. 198, AGO, dated August 6, 1917 First Provisional Regiment created. In accordance with Special Orders No. 311, AGO, dated December 11, 1917, a Provisional Brigade was created consisting of the First and Second Provisional Regiments already on duty. Brigade was disbanded by Special Orders #277 of The Adjutant General's Office on November 18, 1918.

The First Provisional Regiment guarded the water supply of the City of New York and was under the command of Colonel John. B. Rose, 1st Infantry, N.Y.G. Its territory extended from the northern boundary line of the City of New York along the line of the Croton Aqueduct to Croton Lake, from thence to a point near Cold Spring on the east bank of the Hudson river at Breakneck tunnel where the Aqueduct crosses under the river to Storm King Mountain. Thence along the Aqueduct to Aahokan Reservoir, a distance of 96 miles. Two hundred forty-seven vulnerable points were guarded. The headquarters were at Croton Lake for the greater portion of the tour, but were eventually moved to Ossining.

The territory guarded by the Second Provisional Regiment, which was commanded by Major George J. Winslow, Inspector General, 3d Brigade, N. Y. G., extended from Albany and Troy along the line of the Barge canal to Whitehall, and from Waterford along the line of the Barge and Erie canals west to Tonawanda, north from Syracuse to Oswego, southwest from Syracuse to Waterloo with posts at the International Railroad Bridge at Niagara Falls, the bridge of the Central New England Railroad at Poughkeepsie, public buildings and two New York Central Railroad bridges at Albany. Also the Niagara Falls power plant(s), and various other railroad bridges (near Utica, Elmira) across the state.

After the Armistice was signed and the Federalized New York National Guard units were returned to State status, New York Guard units were deactivated. 29 December 1919. Official disbandment orders AGO#4 dated 12 Jan 1923 effective 16 Jan 1923.

WORLD WAR II

In 1940 under the threat of being pulled into the world at war, New York Army National Guard units were being rapidly inducted into federal service. On 21 October 1940 the 76th Congress removed the restrictions on Section 61 of the National Defense Act to allow State Military Forces. This had been heavily pushed for some time by New York Governor Lehman and Massachusetts Governor Saltonstall. The Governor directed the organization of the New York Guard and on 25 October 1940 General Orders Nos. 40 was issued by the Adjutant General's office.

Planning for the New York Guard, to include identification of force structure, Regimental Commanders and those NYARNG personnel "physically unfit" for activation, had been commenced as early as July and August by MG William N. Haskell, Commander NYARNG, until his activation on 23 October. The NYG was organized effective 25 October 1940 and on that same date MG William Ottmann assumed command. Initially BG George P. Tyner was the Chief of Staff.

The NYG structure consisted of one Headquarters, 5 Brigade Headquarters and 20 Regiments for a total of 1,116 Officers and 12,573 enlisted. The 1st, 2nd and 5th Brigades were in Metropolitan New York City, the 3rd Brigade was in Albany and the 4th Brigade was in Buffalo. In 1941 two additional Regiments were organized, in 1942 two separate Battalions were added in Long Island, and in 1943 a separate colored Battalion was added in the Brooklyn and Queens county area.

By late 1945 the war was over and the National Guard Bureau was working on new ARNG force structures for the states. LTG Drum developed a new TDA to reposition the NYG for conversion into the new NYARNG. This new force structure was to be implemented 1 January 1946.

On 7 October 1946, an official National Guard troop allotment was accepted, and the New York Guard of World War II was phased out of existence by the reorganization of the National Guard effective 30 November 1946.

POST WWII - State War – Disaster Military Corps (SW-DMC New York Guard).

The NYG Strength by December 1946 remained at 17,060. In February 1947 the state organized a State War – Disaster Military Corps (SW-DMC New York Guard). By 31 Dec 1947 the strength of this organization was 401 officers and 3,590 enlisted. It was organized with two Division HHC's, and single companies of Regiments. Under the Command and Control of the NYARNG MACOMs there was no NYG Headquarters. Infantry Regiments had 3 companies each, all other had one company each.

SW-DMC Strength by 31 December 1948 was 273 officers and 2,290 enlisted. In late 1948 a question of legality under section 61 of the National Defense Act became an issue. On 1 June 1949, the State War – Disaster Military Corps (New York Guard) was disbanded.

KOREAN CONFLICT – Planning Cadre's & Administrative and Logistical Support for Emergency Operations

June 1950, Communist North Korean forces crossed the 38th Parallel and invaded pro U.S. South Korea. After several New York National Guard units had been ordered into Federal service, the Chief of Staff to the Governor directed planning for the reorganization of a New York Guard. However, only Area and Zone Command Headquarters were organized. Organized under AGO#22 24 July 1950.
