HISTORY OF THE 106TH INFANTRY, U. S. A.

GENERAL ORDERS No. 9

HEADQUARTERS, 27TH DIVISION, U. S. A.

Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C.

October 1, 1917.

Pursuant to telegraphic orders from the War Department, dated September 11, 1917, this Division is organized under the provisions of General Orders No. 101, War Department, 1917, as follows:

The 53d Infantry Brigade, Brigadier General R. E. L. Michie commanding, consisting of Brigade Headquarters, the 105th and 106th Regiments of Infantry and the 105th Machine Gun Battalion, is organized as follows:

The 106th Regiment of Infantry (23d N. Y. Infantry), Colonel Frank H. Norton commanding.

The Commanding Officer of the 14th N. Y. Infantry will transfer to the 106th Regiment of Infantry 1,292 enlisted men of appropriate grades.

The above order constituted the birth of the 106th Regiment of Infantry, U. S. A.

HISTORY OF THE 23D REGIMENT NEW YORK INFANTRY, NATIONAL GUARD

The original organization which ultimately became the parent unit of the 23d Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., was formed at a meeting held at Gothic Hall in Brooklyn, New York, May 1, 1861, and the name City Guard Reserve soon afterwards assumed. A desire for a regimental organization was soon manifested, and a committee reported the existence of a number of detached companies eligible for inauguration into a regiment. At a meeting of the City Guard Reserve January 6, 1862, the question of a regimental organization was left to the commissioned officers, Captain William Everdell, Jr., First Lieutenant Thomas Brooks and Second Lieutenant L. D. Atwater, and they reported that the company had been pledged to start the 23d Regiment. A committee was selected from the roll with power to draft a plan of organization. That committee recommended a plan under which it was proposed to split the City Guard Reserve in two parts—one part to form Company A of the new regiment and the other to constitute Company C, and that Captain Beers' company—the Excelsior Guards—should form Company B.

On January 20, 1862, the first Companies A, B and C were mustered into the 23d Regiment of the 11th Brigade, commanded by General Jesse C. Smith. On March 17th the City Guard, commanded by Captain Bassett, was mustered in as Company D. During the summer Companies E and F were mustered in and in August and September a ten-company status was attained by the organization of Companies G, H, I and K.

Captain Everdell was selected as first Colonel of the regiment July 14, 1862. On June 18, 1863, the regiment under Colonel Everdell left the armory, then located at Orange and Fulton Streets, to serve in the Gettysburg Campaign and was mustered into the U. S. Volunteer service until July 22, 1863. The regiment was not organized in the other campaigns with the National Guard. After its return the regiment was on guard for about sixty days from July to September at East New York and Brooklyn because of the riots prevailing at that time. Colonel Everdell resigned October 3, 1863, and was succeeded by Colonel Calvin E. Pratt, who in turn resigned on March 24, 1868, and Lieutenant-Colonel Rodney C. Ward was selected Colonel of the regiment.

The regiment commanded by Colonel Ward visited Long Branch, New Jersey, August 4, 1871, and was reviewed by General U. S. Grant. The armory at Orange and Fulton Streets was too small to accommodate the regiment and for this reason all regimental formations were made in Monroe Place.

During the administration of Colonel Ward the cornerstone of a new armory on Clermont Avenue near Myrtle Avenue was laid on October 28, 1872, and possession of the armory taken the following year on September 29, 1873.

In July, 1877, Governor Robinson ordered Colonel Ward to proceed with the 23d to Hornellsville, and at eight o'clock in the evening the regiment marched from the armory—three hundred strong—leaving a detachment to follow on the next day under Major Alfred Cutler Barnes. The regiment was stationed in and around Hornellsville station, roundhouses and yards guarding the railroad property against attacks of rioting strikers. It took out the first train that had been moved east for several days, repelled a number of attacks, protected the railroad men and assisted so well in the administration of justice that it finally restored order without the necessity of firing at the rioters. On its return to Brooklyn, July 27, it was given an enthusiastic reception by the citizens with pyrotechnics and welcoming speeches and received the thanks of Governor Robinson for the service it had rendered the State.

On December 26, 1879, Colonel Ward retired and was placed on the supernumerary list of the State by the Commander-in-Chief. Lieutenant-Colonel John N. Partridge was then elected his successor and served as Colonel from January 10, 1880, until February 15, 1882. Upon Colonel Partridge's resignation, Colonel Ward was re-elected Colonel of the regiment and served from March 8, 1882, until his promotion to be Brigadier-General in command of the 4th Brigade, February 25, 1886.

During the second administration of Colonel Ward the 23d had the honor of opening the State encampment at Peekskill in July, 1882, and its percentage of attendance was eighty-five, being greater than that of any other organization during that year.

Major Charles L. Fincke, a popular and efficient officer, who had resigned February 18, 1885, was called into service as the new Colonel. His service commenced March 22, 1886, and was marked in its efficiency. Under Colonel Fincke the regiment had made a second visit to Newport, Rhode Island, in July, 1886. Colonel Fincke resigned May 11, 1887, because of ill health, caused by his close application to the duties of the position he held, and his death soon followed.

History repeated itself and Colonel John N. Partridge was recalled from civil life to command the regiment and this time served as Colonel from October 17, 1887 to February 10, 1894. Under Colonel Partridge the regiment reached the highest numbers since its organization and led the State in shooting.

An appropriation was secured from the State and a site purchased for a new armory in the rapidly-growing Bedford section of the city. The cornerstone of the new armory on Bedford Avenue, between Pacific Street and Atlantic Avenue, was laid by Governor David B. Hill on November 14, 1891, amid impressive ceremonies with the regiment paraded in a hollow square. The building was completed in 1894 and the regiment marched into its new home November 3d. All of the company rooms and the headquarters were fitted and decorated from funds raised by the regiment.

Colonel Alexis C. Smith was the next commanding officer, serving from February 26, 1894, to January 17, 1900. The organization was not called upon for service in the Spanish-American War, although it volunteered its services under Colonel Smith on three different occasions. In spite of the fact that it was not taken as a regiment almost enough officers and men volunteered to form a battalion of the 201st New York Volunteer Infantry.

In 1900, after the Spanish-American War, General Alfred Cutler Barnes, a former Lieutenant-Colonel of the regiment, was called back as Colonel and served as such until April 27, 1904, when he was retired as a Brevet Brigadier-General. Many brilliant functions took place under Colonel Barnes, including a review of the regiment by the Chinese Minister, Wu Ting Fang, on February 12, 1901, and a parade and review on Governor's Island, June 27, 1903, by General Adna R. Chaffee.

The regiment made a number of trips through the country in addition to those already mentioned, including the celebration of the Centennial at Philadelphia, July, 1876; camped at Newport, Rhode Island, June 3 to 10, 1879; participated in the inauguration of President William McKinley in 1901 and of President Theodore Roosevelt in 1905.

Lieutenant-Colonel William A. Stokes was selected as the successor to Colonel Barnes, serving until 1909. Colonel Stokes gained a splendid reputation as a tactician and disciplinarian, and under his command the 23d was the first National Guard regiment to train at the Government reservation at Pine Camp, Jefferson County, New York. The regiment's tour of duty was from June 14 to 25, 1908.

Lieutenant-Colonel Frank Hastings Norton, who succeeded to that rank May 1, 1907, was elected to succeed Colonel Stokes with rank from July 26, 1909, and accepted the office at the unanimous request of the officers of the regiment on August 4 of that year. Colonel Norton inaugurated many changes in the regiment and brought it up to a high standard, so that it was selected as one of the nine regiments of infantry to leave the State for the Mexican Border under the call of the President of June 19, 1916.

The regiment left the armory for Mexican Border service July 4, 1916, and arrived at Pharr, Texas, July 11th, with a strength of about twelve hundred men. During its service on the Border the regiment took part in a ten-day forced march through the desert section of Hidalgo County without losing a man. Different detachments of the regiment were stationed on the Rio Grande through the fall and early winter for the purpose of guarding against raids by the Mexicans and received the highest compliments from the Brigade Commander, General William Wilson, and the Division Commander, Major-General John F. O'Ryan.

During its service on the Border an enlisted band was organized and brought to a high state of efficiency. The Headquarters, Supply and Machine Gun Companies were also organized by details from the line companies.

The regiment left the Border on January 2d and arrived in Brooklyn January 9, 1917, where it was received with great acclaim, being escorted from South Ferry to the armory by over fifteen hundred veterans of the regiment. The regiment was enthusiastically received throughout its entire line of march and received much favorable mention from the newspapers. It was mustered out of the United States Service January 19, 1917, and resumed its place in the National Guard of New York State.

In anticipation of threatened trouble with Germany, it was again called into the service of the United States on March 31, 1917, under the call of the President of March 30th, and was the first Federal force engaged in the protection of the water supply of the City of New York. This call came direct from the War Department because of the splendid record of the regiment in its previous service. A battalion of the 47th Regiment and a squadron of the First Cavalry were also called and assigned to duty with the 23d and placed under the command of Colonel Norton. The Lieutenant-Colonelcy, which had become vacant through the resignation of Lieutenant-Colonel William E. Welsh, a regular army officer serving with the regiment during the Mexican Border service, was filled by the promotion of the Regimental-Adjutant, Morris N. Liebmann.

The regiment was stationed from the northern end of the New York City line to Storm King Mountain on the Hudson, with the other troops attached to the regiment prolonging the line north along the water system. The entire system of guarding and protecting the water supply was remodeled by Colonel Norton and was adopted by the troops of the New York Guard, which took over the work of protecting the aqueduct.

During the early summer a detachment of more than 350 trained men was transferred to the 165th U. S. Infantry (old 69th N. Y.) to help fill the ranks of that regiment. In August, 1917, the regiment was reassembled at Van Cortlandt Park and on September 29, 1917, marched through New York escorted by the Veteran Association to the 23d Street Ferry, where it was transported to the Central Railroad of New Jersey, for duty at Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, South Carolina. When it left New York State, the regiment had a strength of more than 2400 officers and men, the largest number of any regiment in the State. On October 1st the regimental designation was changed to the 106th United States Infantry, by General Order No. 9, Headquarters, 27th Division, the entire regimental strength having been drafted by the President August 5, 1917.

The strength of the regiment was increased by detachments of officers and men from the 14th and 47th Regiments of Brooklyn and commenced a thorough course of intensive training in modern warfare under the direction of Colonel Norton. On the final examination of the personnel of the regiment on the eve of its departure for France, greatly to the regret of every man in the regiment, Colonel Norton was certified by the surgeons to be physically incapacitated for foreign service and was honorably discharged.

After the regiment had been called into Federal service in March, 1917, a Depot Battalion was formed under the command of Major James Robb, a former Captain of Company C.

He was ably assisted by Captains Thomas Fairservis, Clifford F. Lamont, Ethelbert Green and Vivian L. Outerbridge, former officers of the 23d Regiment, and the new organization quickly expanded into a regiment. Major Robb was promoted Colonel of the new 23d Infantry, New York Guard, as it was called by the State, to distinguish it from the old National Guard, which had ceased to be a State force. Captain Louis Jewett Praeger, formerly Captain of Company A for ten years, was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel and Captains Fairservis, Lamont and Green were appointed Majors.

Colonel Robb was subsequently promoted to be Brigadier-General of the new Second Brigade of the New York Guard and was succeeded by Colonel Praeger, who now commands the new regiment. Major Fairservis was promoted to be Lieutenant-Colonel and Captain Outerbridge was promoted to be Major. Colonel Praeger is a strict soldier and a stern disciplinarian, and the new regiment under his command is upholding the traditions of the old 23d.

HISTORY OF THE 14TH REGIMENT NEW YORK INFANTRY, NATIONAL GUARD

In the year 1844, the militia of Kings and Richmond counties constituted the Second New York Division, under command of Major General Underhill. A new regiment, the 265th, had been added to the 44th Brigade and its Colonel, Gilbert Reid, was in that year made Brigade Commander. These two men, with the best interests of the service at heart, had labored long for a better organization of the militia, and it was due in part to their activities that the Legislature of the State, on May 13, 1847, passed a bill calling for the reorganization of the State militia by consolidating and reducing the number of brigades and regiments.

It was the general intention to encourage the formation of uniformed companies and place the citizen soldiery on a more distinctively military basis. Under the provisions of this bill, eight companies of light infantry, riflemen, grenadiers or infantry, were to form a regiment, with two additional flank companies, one of cavalry and one of artillery. On or about the fifth of July, 1847, the 265th Regiment, according to the bill, became the 14th Regiment, New York State Militia. Previous to this time, there were no uniformed regiments, outside of the First Division, in the State.

Colonel Willets had been appointed by the Governor of the State, in 1846, to organize the 14th Regiment and lay out the regimental district, but being unsuccessful, he had been relieved, and Phillip S. Crook appointed as Colonel to do this work. At a meeting held in Mrs. Prest's Military Garden, which stood where the County Court House is now located, these companies participated in an enthusiastic initial muster: National Guard, Company A, the Union Blues or City Grenadiers, already organized and uniformed. From various sources, principally from the Washington Guards, a volunteer organization attached to the No. 1 Fire Engine Company, there was quickly recruited the number of men required by law (thirty-two) for another company, which was duly inspected and designated as Company B.

These were the only two companies recruited until in February, 1848, when Company C was completed. The Franklin Guards were recruited from No. 3 Fire Engine Company and mustered as Company D. The Steuben Guards were organized and took the letter E. The Shields Guards were mustered as Company F, and the Columbian Rifles as Company G. From nearby villages the complement of men was gathered to form Company H.

It was about 1858 that Companies B and E withdrew from the regiment, and Company A was split into two other companies, which became known as B and E.

In the summer of 1854, the regiment took part in the suppression of riots created by the preachings of a fanatic who called himself "The Angel Gabriel." Encampment was on the Joralemon lots. The companies of the 14th did notable service during the Williamsburg riots also.

It was after this that it took part in a general State encampment.

The regiment paraded on April 27, 1859, at the celebration of the introduction of water into the city. In October, 1860, it took part in the great reception tendered to the Prince of Wales, on this occasion wearing for the first time the new uniform, dark blue single-breasted frock coat, three rows of buttons, gold lace trimmings, dark blue trousers, buff stripe and shako.

In April, 1861, the regiment was on several occasions called out and quartered in the armory at Odcan, E. D., in anticipation of an attack upon the Navy Yard by rebel sympathizers. Besides these events of unusual import, the 14th took its part in the usual city and State military parade, demonstrations and encampments.

Companies I and K were organized in July, 1861, and they reached Camp Porter, Virginia, in that same month.

Upon receipt of the news of the firing upon Fort Sumpter in 1861, measures were at once taken to place the 14th Regiment upon a war footing. Vacancies among the commissioned officers were filled, and recruiting was begun under President Lincoln's proclamation for 75,000 three-months troops. The ranks were so quickly filled that on April 18, 1861, report was made to headquarters that the regiment was in readiness to be marched to the front. Until May 18 the regiment remained in Brooklyn drilling and equipping, expecting daily to receive marching orders.

It was not long before the 14th was given the opportunity to show that they meant business. Colonel Wood telegraphed to Washington that his regiment was in readiness to take the field. He was informed that no more men would be received for a shorter term than for three years—"Three years or the war," the phrase went. The different companies of the regiment were, therefore, drawn up and asked if they would enlist for that length of time. The response was instantaneous. It left no room for doubt of the temper of the command. With scarcely a dissenting voice, the regiment accepted the terms of enlistment into the United States service proposed to them.

The order came from Washington on May 18, 1861, for the 14th to start for Washington. At this time the regiment was locally known as the "Brooklyn Chasseurs." Later, when it arrived upon the field of action, and fought its way to fame, the regiment was rechristened by the men in gray. The title, "Red-legged Devils," was derived partly from the fact that the men wore red trousers, but also because they had a habit of making their presence felt wherever they went. It was for this trait also that they were called the "Fighting 14th."

The regiment arrived in Washington about 9 p. m. on the nineteenth, twenty-four hours after leaving Jersey City.

On May 23d it was mustered into the United States service for the period of the war unless sooner discharged. The 14th was then known as the 84th U. S. Volunteers. Until July 2d the regiment remained in "Camp Wood" (named after Colonel A. M. Wood, the commanding officer) drilling and doing guard and picket duty. On this date, camp was broken, the Potomac crossed by way of Long Bridge, and another camp made in the vicinity of the Arlington House. While in this camp, Companies I and K were added to the organization. The regimental aggregate now being 960, it was assigned to the brigade of Brigadier General Andrew Porter.

The regiment remained in Camp Porter until July 16, doing guard and picket duty. About 4 p. m. on that day, march was begun toward Richmond, Va.

It is impossible in the limited amount of space which we have to enumerate the many battles which the "Fighting 14th" participated in and covered themselves with glory.

It was about mid-day on the twenty-second of May, 1864, when a regiment of battle-scarred soldiers in blue halted near the Bowling Green road in Virginia and rested arms. The men were bearded and unkempt, their clothing was worn and weather-stained, many wore bandages, all bore the unmistakable marks of many marches, of many days and nights in the trenches and on the firing line. There was an air about them that bespoke their veteranship, a poise, a glint in the eyes, a quietness, which proved a discipline not learned in classrooms.

But there was another light in the eyes—one of great anticipation. They were waiting for something—an order, a word. They stood waiting patiently. The Colonel of the regiment appeared, and then the word, like a whispered question, ran along the lines. It was "Home."

Almost before the officer had finished reading a short order he held, the spirit of the lines in blue changed. The role of the soldier seemed to vanish, the ranks broke, men threw their caps high in the air and cheered and shouted and danced with joy. It was true! Their work was ended!

THEY WERE GOING HOME!

On the afternoon of the twenty-fourth of May, 1864, the quartermaster's department furnished cattle cars into which the men of the 14th piled, and the last leg of the trip home was begun. It was expected that Brooklyn would be reached the next morning, but numerous delays prevented the regiment from reaching Jersey City until the evening of the twenty-fifth. At Elizabethtown a committee of Brooklyn citizens boarded the train and the first part of a royal reception was given the "Red-legs."

After a splendid dinner at Taylor's Hotel, in Jersey City, the regiment, with its escort, embarked on one of the Fulton ferry boats for the City of Churches—home at last.

And thus ended the memorable services of the gallant regiment of Brooklyn men, who, for three long years, had risked their lives for their country's flag, and in doing so, had won not only signal honor, but undying fame.

THE FOURTEENTH IN THE SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR

The 14th Regiment Infantry, New York Volunteers, as the organization became known when, in May, 1898, it was mustered into the service of the United States to take part in the Spanish-American War, saw only about four months' camp service and did not reach the front. Every preparation was made for duty in Cuba, however, and the troops were in a fine state of organization. Officers and men were anxious to participate in the real action, but this ultimate movement was finally deemed unnecessary by the Government.

MEXICAN BORDER SERVICE AND WAR WITH GERMANY

On June 19, 1916, the regiment, under command of Colonel John H. Foote, was called into the Federal service for duty on the Mexican Border. They arrived at Mission, Texas, on July 2d and remained there until September 7th, when they were ordered home, and on October 11, 1916, were mustered out of the service of the United States. In July the regiment was again ordered into the Federal service for the war with Germany, under command of Colonel James R. Howlett, he having succeeded Colonel Foote, who had been promoted to Brigadier General. The regiment trained at Sheepshead Bay. While there, about three hundred and fifty of the enlisted men were transferred to the 165th, which formed a part of the Rainbow Division and was one of the first divisions to go to France. On September 29th the balance of the regiment was ordered to Spartanburg, S. C., After arriving there about 1300 officers and men were transferred to the 23d and became the 106th Regiment of the 27th Division. This left but a skeleton organization, which later became the 2d Pioneer Regiment, under command of Colonel Howlett.
